Spainhower in Senate race

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — State Treasurer James Spainhower has tossed his hat into the political ring for consideration as the Democratic nominee for the U.S. Senate.

The 60 members of the Missouri Democratic State Committee are to meet here Aug. 21 to choose the person to fill the vacuum left by the death of Congressman Jerry Litton. The Chillicothe Democrat was killed in a plane crash last Tuesday while winning the party's U.S. Senate nomination.

"Should Missouri Democrats through the state committee selection process ask me to withdraw from the treasurer's race because they believe I am the person best able to unify and represent the viewpoints of our great and diverse party in the senatorial campaign, I would willingly and happily do so," Spainhower told reporters here Saturday afternoon.

He spoke at a news conference called to give details of the Missouri Democratic Executive Committee meeting, which was held to set a date for the state committee session. It will be at that meeting that a nominee will be chosen to succeed Litton, who handily won the party's primary last Tuesday over former Gov. Warren E. Hearnes and U.S. Rep. James Symington.

Symington has withdrawn his name from among those being considered to run against Republican Atty. Gen. John C. Danforth, who nearly won the Senate race against Sen. Stuart Symington six years ago.

Hearnes' supporters contend he should get the party nod, since he finished second to Litton, who collected an awesome 45 per cent of the vote to Hearnes' 27 per cent and Symington's 25 per cent.

No sooner had Spainhower made public his availability, than St. Louis License Collector Benjamin Goins, a member of the executive committee, told reporters that the former Missouri governor should be the party nomineee "if the democratic system is to prevail."

"To deny Warren Hearnes an opportunity to run as the Democratic candidate would completely destroy the Democratic party in this state," Goins said.

Spainhower said he would not solicit the nomination nor would he authorize anyone to do so in his behalf by contacting the committee members.

He only said that through his public announcement, he was letting the committee members know that he would run if drafted by the committee.

"I urge the state committee to exercise extreme care in selecting a canidate who brings with him or her no additional handicaps," said Spainhower, who was renominated for a second treasurer's term without opposition Tuesday. If elected, Spainhower would have to resign as the party's nomineee for treasurer, and the state committee would again have to select another statewide candidate replacing him.

While more than 380,000 persons casting ballots in the Democratic U.S. Senate primary chose Litton to carry the party banner, the decision on who will be his successor rests in the hands of 31 of the 60 members of the state committee.

A simple majority will be needed to name the nominee, but getting that majority won't be so simple.

Although Hearnes, who was Missouri's governor for eight years and secretary of state for four before that, has support among many members of the committee, there are those who say a fresh face like Spainhower's might be needed. Also being mentioned are U.S. Rep. William Hungate, who has announced his retirement from the 9th District congressional seat and Chares E. Curry of Kansas City, former presiding judge of the Jackson County Court.

The campaign workers of Congressman Litton will also have something to say about who takes the place of their fallen leader.

Two of the late representative's campaign aides, Norman Sanders and John Ashford, were present for Saturday's executive committee meeting.

"They wanted it understood that they're still a part of this campaign and want to participate in it," said John McIlroy, state party chairman.

He said "They were interested in the welfare of the Democratic party as a whole."

McIlroy would not say whether he expected a floor fight as to who should get the nomination, but said, "It's going to attract the attention of all Missouri Democrats."

He said Litton's campaign workers would be included in the selection process.

Killer disease still a mystery

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)— Shortly before midnight last Sunday, Aug. 1 the first call came. Within 10 hours it set in motion one of the biggest germ hunts in medical history.

But by week's end, disease detectives still didn't know what had killed 25 persons who had attended a state American Legion convention in Philadelphia July 21-24.

Nor did they know why 110 others had become ill with the same pneumonia-like symptoms.

The facts were chilling.

Only Legionnaires, their wives and two men who had contact with them were falling ill.

And one in four was dying.

There was no clue to what the mysterious disease was. Or how it started. Or whether it would race in epidemic form to strike other family members, friends and associates back home.

Fright still permeates the shocked 10,000 who attended the Legion conclave, as they wordriedly wait for the medical sleuths to solve the mystery.

"There is a possibility that we may never find an answer," admits Dr. Leonard Bachman, state health secretary. "The health system doesn't always produce miracles. People do get sick suddenly, and they do die."

But then Bachman, a man always in relentless pursuit of the biological enemy, swiftly discards his suggestion of pessimism and failure: "If it takes a year or more we are going to get to the bottom of it."

Deliberately, tenaciously, through sleepless nights and days, the search goes on in the hospitals, in the morgues, and in the guarded laboratories for the virulent virus, the bacteria, the toxin, the fungi—whatever it was or is—that so discriminately struck at legionnaires.

Because it is still unknown, maybe never to be really known, this mystery killer and its specific target has been tagged with a number of unscientific names—Legionnaires Disease, Philadelphia Fever, Veterans Virus.

Legionnaires Disease was an actual diagnosis by a physician treating a patient at Harrisburg Hospital, doctors said Saturday.

On the medical chart of Walter White, 55, a Harrisburg electrician, his doctor wrote: "Pneumonia-Legionnaires Disease."

"There are millions of leads that might be followed," says Bachman of the probe that is costing the state and federal governments about $25,000 each a day. "But the epidemiologists are following up the leads that they feel have a potential for payoff."

The epidemiologists—communicable disease detectives—have interviewed every legionnaire who became ill, following them to their hospital beds, or to their homes, talking to their doctors, to their families, to their friends, asking question

Irregularities alleged in Carter campaign

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Jimmy Carter campaign gave donations to black ministers who supported him in the California primary and paid out other "street money" that was not properly accounted for, The Los Angeles Times said in its Sunday editions.

The Carter campaign may have to return $150,000 in federal funds because of financial irregularities, The Times reported.

The Times said that it surveyed public records in Ohio, California and New Jersey and turned up several instances in which campaign funds spent in black and minority communities lacked required receipts.

Paul Hemmann, Carter's national administrator whose duties include financial accounting, was quoted as saying that irregularities in financial reporting may force the Carter campaign to return $150,000 of the $3 million in federal matching funds it has received.

Shortly before the June 8 California primary — which Carter lost to California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr. — the Carter campaign gave a total of $5,000 to four black ministers in the Oakland Bay area, the Times said.

The Rev. J.L. Richards of Oakland, whom the Times described as one of the most influential black ministers in the Oakland area, said he received $2,000 from Carter campaign coffers.

Richards is a leader of two pastors' groups.

"I paid out money to some of the ministers in my group; some got $25 and some $50 — donations, that's all," Richards was quoted as saying.

BENTON — Two Scott County men, one Republican and one Democrat were chosen to assist Scott County Clerk Bob Kielhofner in the canvass of tally books from the Aug. 3 primary.

Kielhofner said Friday that Ollie Amick of Illmo, representing the Democratic party and George T. Johnson, 403 Dorothy Street, Sikeston, representing the Republican party, would assist him in the canvass of the tally books.

He said in the primary 10,500 or 57 per cent of the 18,653 registered Scott County voters had cast ballots.

Canvassing of the tally books, Kiehofner explained, is to confirm the tally marks made by the precinct officials with the total given. This is not a recounting of the ballots, he said, and should be completed in six to eight hours.

The results of the canvass will then be certified and sent to Secretary of State James C. Kirkpatrick, who will determine the winner of the primary election, Kiehofner said.

Gibson and Troy Howerton had RBI hits during their two run first that put Arkansas City head of Chaffee in the opener. They came back to get five in the third, with the big blow being Gibson's two- run homer over the left field fence at Harmon Field. Harvey Fields also had a two- run single in the inning.

Gibson held Chaffee- Illmo to one hit as he also got the win on the mound.

Howerton was the shutout victor in the second game as they blanked Ottumwa 5-zip. Arkansas City scored three in the first, with Lonnie Fry's two-run single being the clutch hit. Gibson drove home a pair with a double in the second, which saw the winners add thee more runs to their lead.

Howerton struck out nine while firing a four-hitter for the Arkansas City team.

U.S. women falter as Russians win dual meet

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Ludmila Bragina set a world record and the Soviet Union women's relay team set another Saturday as the United States, with one of its poorest women's performances in history, lost a dual track and field meet to the Soviets.

The Soviet squad captured the cumulative men's and women's scoring, 211-157, although the U.S. men outscored their counterparts 115-107.

Miss Bragina led an awesome women's assault by capturing the 3,000-meter run in a blazing 8 minutes, 27.1 seconds for a world record.

The Soviet women's mile relay team was clocked in 3:29.1 to smash the previous world mark of 3:30.3 set by West Germany last year.

In 13 of the 14 women's events, Soviet athletes placed 1-2. The only breakthrough came when Olympic silver medalist Kathy McMillan of Raeford, N.C., finished second in the long jump to Lidiya Alfeyeva.

The American women's squad, which could have scored 40 points just by showing up, wound up with 42. The women's team was weakened when at least a dozen Olympic team members, who were apparently homesick, did not show up for this two-day, rain-punctuated meet at the University of Maryland.

America's men, however, outscored the soviet men for the 10th time in 14 meetings dating back to 1958 when the series started.

American women have won just once.

The Soviet union leads in the over-all series 11-2-1 with the tie coming in 1971.

Edwin Moses of Atlanta and Mike Shine of Youngsville, Pa., repeated their 1-2 finish in the Olympic 400-meter hurdles and Olympic gold medal winner Mac Wilkins of San Jose, Calif., won the discus for the top men's performances.

Moses, whose world record of 47.64 won the Olympic title, clocked 48.55 and Wilkins tossed 217-2, 15 feet short of his own world record. Both marks were meet records.

Miss Bragina, the 1972 Olympic 1,500 meter champion, finished only fifth in that event in the Olympics at Montreal and was considered over the hill. But her amazing performance through misty rain was one of nine records set by Soviet women during the two days.

The 33-year-old Miss Bragina wiped out the previous world mark of 8:45.4 set two months ago by Grete Waitz of Norway.

The Soviet men, who trailed 59-46 after the first day, actually closed the gap Saturday when Alexander Barishnikov won the shot put at 69-43-4 and Viktor Anohin and Vladimir Ponomarevran finished 1-2 in the men's 800 to score upsets.

Embarrassment was added to injury when the third best Soviet woman 800-meter runner, Tatyana Providokhina, won the event in 1:57.0, the fastest time ever run on American soil.

There was consolation for Madeline Manning Jackson, whose third-place 1:57.9 bettered her own American record of 1:59.8.

Rain again spoiled high-jumper Dwight Stones' hopes when the world record holder failed to clear 7-5 and wound up last.

Stones placed only third during an Olympic rainstorm, and although he said he would never again jump in the rain he gave it a try Saturday and managed 7-2. His second attempt at 7-5 was very close, but the crossbar slipped off moments later.

A mile relay rather than the traditional 1,600-meter relay was run because the United States wanted to lower its own men's world record of 3:02.4. A team of Moses, Benny Brown, Fred Newhouse and Maxie Parks won in 3:02.6 as poor baton passes probably ruined record chances.

Indicative of the women's plight was their mile relay. A U.S. quartet of Debra Sapenter, Sheila Ingram, Pam Giles and Rosalyn Bryant captured a silver medal behind East Germany in Montreal. But Saturday, with Giles and Bryant not running, the U.S. team finished 4.7 seconds behind the Soviets.

Still, the combined defeat was not as humiliating as last year's 225-138 Soviet victory in Kiev.

The victory helped the Soviet women maintain their complete dominance over American women. The Soviet women had a 53-40 lead after Friday's competition.

Finishing second in the 3,000 was Raisa Katyukova of the Soviet Union in 8:41.8, and third was Francie Larrieu of Long Beach, Calif., in 8:54.9.

Miss Larrieu's time was an American record, bettering the 8:57.2 set by Jan Merrill of Waterford, Conn., in winning the national AAU title this year.

American men got a boost in the javelin earlier on the rainy day when Anthony Hall of New York City upset USSR's former world record holder Janis Lusis with a throw of 268 feet, 2 inches. Lusis threw 267-3.

The 3,000 - meter race will be part of the women's Olympic program in 1980 at Moscow.

Minnesota hurler misses no-hitter

JOINS MARCO STAFF

MARCO ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Former golfing great Gene Sarazen, has tutored Ladies PGA proette Pat Bradley of Westford, Mass., for years. Now she's on the staff at Deltona Corp.'s Marco Island Country Club where Sarazen directs the Tony Lema Memorial pro-am each March.

Ms. Bradley, who turned pro less than three years ago, earned more than $39,000 the first six months on the 1976 tour. She recently won the Girl Talk Classic in New Rochelle, N. Y.

Other pros who aided Ms. Bradley, 25, are John Wirbal of Nashua, N. H., and Eddie Bush of Miami. Their coaching helped her win the New England title for a second time in 1973.

Catcher Fran Healy of the New York Yankees caught both of pitcher Steve Busby's no-hitters while with Kansas City.

When pitcher Doyle Alexander came to the New York Yankees this spring from Baltimore, he showed a 7-2 record against Detroit.

ARLINGTON (AP) — Minnesota's Steve Luebber came within one strike of a no-hitter Saturday night, then gave up two hits and a run to the Texas Rangers before reliever Bill Campbell secured a 3-1 victory.

Luebber, a 27-year-old right-hander with a checkered career, had the Rangers in the palm of his hand until Roy Howell lined a two-out, full-count single that skipped through center fielder Lyman Bostock's legs for a two-base error.

After Howell reached third base on Bostock's miscue, he scored on a sharp single by Mike Hargrove. At this point, Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch came to the mound and shook Luebber's hand, took the ball and called for Campbell. The reliever promptly ended it by striking out Jeff Burroughs.

Until the ninth, Luebber had allowed only three runners to reach base—when the Rangers loaded the bases on two walks and an error in the seventh inning.

The error was on a wide throw by second baseman Bobby Randall on a ground ball by Burroughs. Randall thought about getting the force at second base but then made a bad throw to first too late to get the runner.

Luebber, who has suffered through bad-arm trouble most of his career, was virtually untouchable through the first eight innings while relying on high fastballs most of the game.

A play by Rod Carew in the second inning saved Luebber in the early going. The veteran infielder dove to his left to stop Hargrove's hard-hit shot beyond the bag and flipped to Luebber to get the runner.

Ferguson evens score with Kaat as Birds dump Phillies again

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joe Ferguson smacked two triples off Philadelphia left-hander Jim Kaat Saturday and claimed he was only evening a score.

"The last time I faced him I hit three shots and all of them were caught," said Ferguson, whose blows contributed to three of the St. Louis Cardinals' runs in a 4-1 victory.

"I got even with him," said Ferguson, who carried a .229 batting average into the nationally-televised game.

Ferguson said he hit a changeup and fast ball thrown by the veteran Kaat, 10-7, for his triples and Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark said neither was a mistake.

"I thought Fergy hit two pretty good pitches. Both of them were low," Ozark said. "On the second one we might have had him out at third but the tag was too high."

Ferguson's hits combined with Mike Anderson's sacrifice flies, made a winner of St. Louis left-hander Pete Falcone, 8-11, who limited the Phillies to five hits before giving way to Al Hrabosky in the ninth inning.

"I'm hot now," said Anderson, a former Philadelphia outfielder who started with only four RBI. "I just shortened up my stroke with the runner at third and made contact."

Falcone, bothered by wildness in the early innings, delivered 124 pitches and had most of his problems with his knuckle curve.

"I couldn't get it over, but my fast ball was moving," Falcone said. "I didn't want to come out of the game, but he (Cards' Manager Red Schoendienst) said I was pushing myself. He's the manager."

A T+Shirt Day crowd of 32,105 and a national television audience watched St. Louis move on top 1-0 in the second inning when Ferguson drilled his first triple and scored on Anderson's sacrifice fly.

Bee Bee Richard singled and came around to score on Don Kessinger's hit in the third. Philadelphia narrowed the lead to 2-1 on Tim McCarver's RBI single before Ferguson tripled to score one run, then came home on Anderson's second sacrifice fly in the fourth.

Prior to the fourth, Philadelphia's only baserunners were Greg Luzinski and McCarver via second-inning walks.

Falcone surrendered a single to Larry Bowa following McCarver's run-scoring hit but retired Kaat on a grounder with the bases full to end the uprising. He then retired 10 straight batters before Garry Maddox and Mike Schmidt stroked successive singles with one out in the eighth.

A throwing error by third baseman Hector Cruz enabled Philadelphia to load the bases with two out, but Falcone worked past the threat by retiring Bob Boone.

Falcone's victory was his second in a row following six losses in his previous seven starts.

Kessinger had two singles and a double for St. Louis.

Sikeston Aces win Scott City Invitational

SCOTT CITY — The Sikeston Aces raced to a 14-3 victory over their hometown rivals, the Sikeston All-Stars, to win the championship of the 9-10 Year - Old Division of the Scott City Invitational Little League Tournament Saturday night.

In the 11- 12 year - old division, Scott City won a pair of games over both Sikeston teams to force a playoff this afternoon at 2:30.

The Aces got three- hit pitching from Chris Stewart, who was voted Most Valuable Player in the tournament. Stewart survived a shaky first inning but was in control the rest of the way as the Aces led throughout the game.

The Aces jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the top of the first and added two in the second, two in the fourth and four more in the sixth. The All-Stars scored two in the first and one in the second.

Brooks Sherman, Robert Merrill, Dennis Bean and Stewart banged out two hits apiece for the Aces. Stewart won two games on the mound in the tournament and batted over .700 to earn the MVP honors.

In the 11-12 year old action, Scott City knocked off the Sikeston Aces 9-7 in seven innings in the loser's bracket contest before downed the All-Stars 6-5 to hand the Sikeston team its first loss of the double-elimination tournament.

After Scott City had taken a 2-0 first- inning lead, the All-Stars bounced back with five in the second. But a Scott City run in the third and three more in the fourth put them back ahead in the see-saw battle.

Sikeston scored twice in the bottom of the sixth to tie the score at 7-7 and take the game into extra innings, but Scott City came back with two in the top of the seventh to win it.

Jim Blattell got the victory over Doug Lambert of the Aces.

Scott City scored twice in the fifth against Sikeston to overcome a 5-4 lead and win it 6-5. Each team scored twice in the first, and the All-Stars tallied three times in the third to make it 5-3. Scott City came back with one in the fourth before rallying for two in the fifth.

Jeff Schwettman got the victory in relief, with Nick Garner taking the loss.

The Sikeston All-Stars used a three-run homer by John Watkins in the seventh inning to advance to the finals of the tournament. Sikeston had to come from behind to tie the game in the sixth, then Watkins' blast gave them a 10-7 victory over the Illmo-Scott City Nationals.

The hosts reached starting hurler Bobby Casey for four runs in the first inning. A five-run fifth by the All-Stars did give them a temporary 6-4 lead, but Scott City quickly erased that. They scored three in the bottom of the fifth and led 7-6 going into the last frame.

Watkins ripped a single with nobody out and eventually scored the run that sent the game into extra-innings. Then, the Sikeston leadoff man and catcher belted the game winner in the seventh.

Friday night in the 11 and 12 year old tournament, the Sikeston Aces swept a pair from the Cape Nationals and Cape Americans.

Marland Beaudean's one out double in the last inning enabled Sikeston to score three rusn and beat Cape's Nationals 4-3. The Aces were trailing 3-1 coming in, whereupon singles by David Braden, Doug Chessor and an error by the Cape pitcher on a ball hit by Tim Lambert loaded the bases. Beaudean's blast cleared the bases and made a winner out of pitcher Mike Hurley. Hurley tossed a three-hitter. Cape scored all of their runs in the top of the first.

David Braden had a single and double and Doug Chessor had two singles to lead the seven-hit Sikeston attack.

Since the Aces were involved in the losers' bracket, they were forced to come right back in a second game and they did, beating the Cape Americans 11-8. Sikeston raced to a 5-1 first frame lead, then had to withstand a four-run Cape sixth to pick up the win. Shane Deal was Sikeston's winning pitcher.

Cleanup man Doug Chessor was the hitting star, going two-for-two with four runs scored. Chessor and Tim Lambert, contributed doubles to the Sikeston hitting splurge.

Cape outhit Sikeston 10-7, but the Aces scored in every inning but the third while advancing in the tournament.

The Sikeston nine and ten year old All-Stars walloped Jackson 15-3 in a four-inning game shortened by the ten-run rule.

Doyle Hutton went the route, tossing a one-hitter. Hutton, Lannie Little and Damon Deal all came up with three hits apiece as Sikeston hitters sprayed 15 safeties over the ballpark.

Sikeston scored eight times in the first, then five more in the third for the runaway decision. They scored at least one run in every inning.

The Sikeston nine and ten year old Aces made it four Sikeston teams in the tournament finals by blanking 10-0 on a shutout by Chris Stewart. Joey McRoy, Sikeston's centerfielder, belted two doubles and Stewart had a double and a triple.

Sikeston scored seven runs in the first, then added three more in the third. The game was stopped after four by the ten-run rule.

Arkansas City meets Jefferson City today in Midwest Plains finals

CHAFFEE — Arkansas City, Kansas knocked off Chaffee - Illmo- Scott City and Ottumwa, Iowa in succession Saturday night to move into the finals of the Midwest Plains Regional 13-Year- Old Babe Ruth League Tournament in Chaffee.

The Kansas State champs dumped Chaffee I-SC 7-4 in the first game, then tripped Ottumwa, Iowa 5-0 in the nightcap. They will take on Jefferson City today at 1:00 in the double- elimination tournament.

Gibson and Troy Howerton had RBI hits during their two run first that put Arkansas City head of Chaffee in the opener. They came back to get five in the third, with the big blow being Gibson's two- run homer over the left field fence at Harmon Field. Harvey Fields also had a two- run single in the inning.

Gibson held Chaffee- Illmo to one hit as he also got the win on the mound.

Howerton was the shutout victor in the second game as they blanked Ottumwa 5-zip. Arkansas City scored three in the first, with Lonnie Fry's two-run single being the clutch hit. Gibson drove home a pair with a double in the second, which saw the winners add thee more runs to their lead.

Howerton struck out nine while firing a four-hitter for the Arkansas City team.

U.S. women falter as Russians win dual meet

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Ludmila Bragina set a world record and the Soviet Union women's relay team set another Saturday as the United States, with one of its poorest women's performances in history, lost a dual track and field meet to the Soviets.

The Soviet squad captured the cumulative men's and women's scoring, 211-157, although the U.S. men outscored their counterparts 115-107.

Miss Bragina led an awesome women's assault by capturing the 3,000-meter run in a blazing 8 minutes, 27.1 seconds for a world record.

The Soviet women's mile relay team was clocked in 3:29.1 to smash the previous world mark of 3:30.3 set by West Germany last year.

In 13 of the 14 women's events, Soviet athletes placed 1-2. The only breakthrough came when Olympic silver medalist Kathy McMillan of Raeford, N.C., finished second in the long jump to Lidiya Alfeyeva.

The American women's squad, which could have scored 40 points just by showing up, wound up with 42. The women's team was weakened when at least a dozen Olympic team members, who were apparently homesick, did not show up for this two-day, rain-punctuated meet at the University of Maryland.

America's men, however, outscored the soviet men for the 10th time in 14 meetings dating back to 1958 when the series started.

American women have won just once.

The Soviet union leads in the over-all series 11-2-1 with the tie coming in 1971.

Edwin Moses of Atlanta and Mike Shine of Youngsville, Pa., repeated their 1-2 finish in the Olympic 400-meter hurdles and Olympic gold medal winner Mac Wilkins of San Jose, Calif., won the discus for the top men's performances.

Moses, whose world record of 47.64 won the Olympic title, clocked 48.55 and Wilkins tossed 217-2, 15 feet short of his own world record. Both marks were meet records.

Miss Bragina, the 1972 Olympic 1,500 meter champion, finished only fifth in that event in the Olympics at Montreal and was considered over the hill. But her amazing performance through misty rain was one of nine records set by Soviet women during the two days.

The 33-year-old Miss Bragina wiped out the previous world mark of 8:45.4 set two months ago by Grete Waitz of Norway.

The Soviet men, who trailed 59-46 after the first day, actually closed the gap Saturday when Alexander Barishnikov won the shot put at 69-43-4 and Viktor Anohin and Vladimir Ponomarevran finished 1-2 in the men's 800 to score upsets.

Embarrassment was added to injury when the third best Soviet woman 800-meter runner, Tatyana Providokhina, won the event in 1:57.0, the fastest time ever run on American soil.

There was consolation for Madeline Manning Jackson, whose third-place 1:57.9 bettered her own American record of 1:59.8.

Rain again spoiled high-jumper Dwight Stones' hopes when the world record holder failed to clear 7-5 and wound up last.

Stones placed only third during an Olympic rainstorm, and although he said he would never again jump in the rain he gave it a try Saturday and managed 7-2. His second attempt at 7-5 was very close, but the crossbar slipped off moments later.

A mile relay rather than the traditional 1,600-meter relay was run because the United States wanted to lower its own men's world record of 3:02.4. A team of Moses, Benny Brown, Fred Newhouse and Maxie Parks won in 3:02.6 as poor baton passes probably ruined record chances.

Indicative of the women's plight was their mile relay. A U.S. quartet of Debra Sapenter, Sheila Ingram, Pam Giles and Rosalyn Bryant captured a silver medal behind East Germany in Montreal. But Saturday, with Giles and Bryant not running, the U.S. team finished 4.7 seconds behind the Soviets.

Still, the combined defeat was not as humiliating as last year's 225-138 Soviet victory in Kiev.

The victory helped the Soviet women maintain their complete dominance over American women. The Soviet women had a 53-40 lead after Friday's competition.

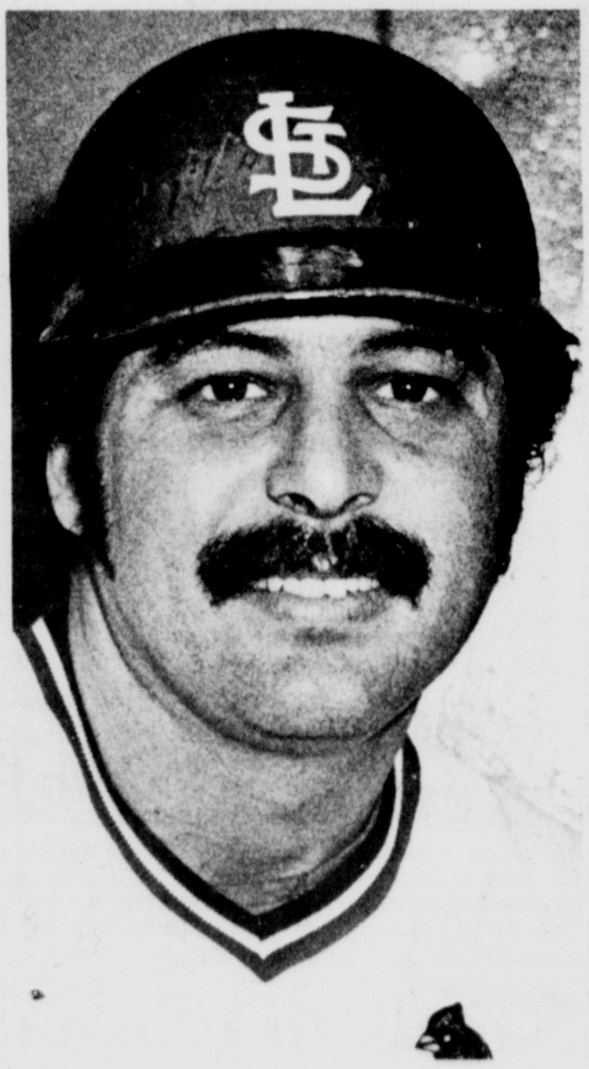

Finishing second in the 3,000 was Raisa Katyukova of the Soviet Union in 8:41.8, and third was Francie Larrieu of Long Beach, Calif., in 8:54.9.

Miss Larrieu's time was an American record, bettering the 8:57.2 set by Jan Merrill of Waterford, Conn., in winning the national AAU title this year.

American men got a boost in the javelin earlier on the rainy day when Anthony Hall of New York City upset USSR's former world record holder Janis Lusis with a throw of 268 feet, 2 inches. Lusis threw 267-3.

The 3,000 - meter race will be part of the women's Olympic program in 1980 at Moscow.

Minnesota hurler misses no-hitter

ARLINGTON (AP) — Minnesota's Steve Luebber came within one strike of a no-hitter Saturday night, then gave up two hits and a run to the Texas Rangers before reliever Bill Campbell secured a 3-1 victory.

Luebber, a 27-year-old right-hander with a checkered career, had the Rangers in the palm of his hand until Roy Howell lined a two-out, full-count single that skipped through center fielder Lyman Bostock's legs for a two-base error.

After Howell reached third base on Bostock's miscue, he scored on a sharp single by Mike Hargrove. At this point, Minnesota Manager Gene Mauch came to the mound and shook Luebber's hand, took the ball and called for Campbell. The reliever promptly ended it by striking out Jeff Burroughs.

Until the ninth, Luebber had allowed only three runners to reach base—when the Rangers loaded the bases on two walks and an error in the seventh inning.

The error was on a wide throw by second baseman Bobby Randall on a ground ball by Burroughs. Randall thought about getting the force at second base but then made a bad throw to first too late to get the runner.

Luebber, who has suffered through bad-arm trouble most of his career, was virtually untouchable through the first eight innings while relying on high fastballs most of the game.

A play by Rod Carew in the second inning saved Luebber in the early going. The veteran infielder dove to his left to stop Hargrove's hard-hit shot beyond the bag and flipped to Luebber to get the runner.

MARCO ISLAND, Fla. (AP) — Former golfing great Gene Sarazen, has tutored Ladies PGA proette Pat Bradley of Westford, Mass., for years. Now she's on the staff at Deltona Corp.'s Marco Island Country Club where Sarazen directs the Tony Lema Memorial pro-am each March.

Ms. Bradley, who turned pro less than three years ago, earned more than $39,000 the first six months on the 1976 tour. She recently won the Girl Talk Classic in New Rochelle, N. Y.

Other pros who aided Ms. Bradley, 25, are John Wirbal of Nashua, N. H., and Eddie Bush of Miami. Their coaching helped her win the New England title for a second time in 1973.

Catcher Fran Healy of the New York Yankees caught both of pitcher Steve Busby's no-hitters while with Kansas City.

When pitcher Doyle Alexander came to the New York Yankees this spring from Baltimore, he showed a 7-2 record against Detroit.

Ferguson evens score with Kaat as Birds dump Phillies again

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Joe Ferguson smacked two triples off Philadelphia left-hander Jim Kaat Saturday and claimed he was only evening a score.

"The last time I faced him I hit three shots and all of them were caught," said Ferguson, whose blows contributed to three of the St. Louis Cardinals' runs in a 4-1 victory.

"I got even with him," said Ferguson, who carried a .229 batting average into the nationally-televised game.

Ferguson said he hit a changeup and fast ball thrown by the veteran Kaat, 10-7, for his triples and Philadelphia Manager Danny Ozark said neither was a mistake.

"I thought Fergy hit two pretty good pitches. Both of them were low," Ozark said. "On the second one we might have had him out at third but the tag was too high."

Ferguson's hits combined with Mike Anderson's sacrifice flies, made a winner of St. Louis left-hander Pete Falcone, 8-11, who limited the Phillies to five hits before giving way to Al Hrabosky in the ninth inning.

"I'm hot now," said Anderson, a former Philadelphia outfielder who started with only four RBI. "I just shortened up my stroke with the runner at third and made contact."

Falcone, bothered by wildness in the early innings, delivered 124 pitches and had most of his problems with his knuckle curve.

"I couldn't get it over, but my fast ball was moving," Falcone said. "I didn't want to come out of the game, but he (Cards' Manager Red Schoendienst) said I was pushing myself. He's the manager."

A T+Shirt Day crowd of 32,105 and a national television audience watched St. Louis move on top 1-0 in the second inning when Ferguson drilled his first triple and scored on Anderson's sacrifice fly.

Bee Bee Richard singled and came around to score on Don Kessinger's hit in the third. Philadelphia narrowed the lead to 2-1 on Tim McCarver's RBI single before Ferguson tripled to score one run, then came home on Anderson's second sacrifice fly in the fourth.

Prior to the fourth, Philadelphia's only baserunners were Greg Luzinski and McCarver via second-inning walks.

Falcone surrendered a single to Larry Bowa following McCarver's run-scoring hit but retired Kaat on a grounder with the bases full to end the uprising. He then retired 10 straight batters before Garry Maddox and Mike Schmidt stroked successive singles with one out in the eighth.

A throwing error by third baseman Hector Cruz enabled Philadelphia to load the bases with two out, but Falcone worked past the threat by retiring Bob Boone.

Falcone's victory was his second in a row following six losses in his previous seven starts.

Kessinger had two singles and a double for St. Louis.

Sikeston Aces win Scott City Invitational

SCOTT CITY — The Sikeston Aces raced to a 14-3 victory over their hometown rivals, the Sikeston All-Stars, to win the championship of the 9-10 Year - Old Division of the Scott City Invitational Little League Tournament Saturday night.

In the 11- 12 year - old division, Scott City won a pair of games over both Sikeston teams to force a playoff this afternoon at 2:30.

The Aces got three- hit pitching from Chris Stewart, who was voted Most Valuable Player in the tournament. Stewart survived a shaky first inning but was in control the rest of the way as the Aces led throughout the game.

The Aces jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the top of the first and added two in the second, two in the fourth and four more in the sixth. The All-Stars scored two in the first and one in the second.

Brooks Sherman, Robert Merrill, Dennis Bean and Stewart banged out two hits apiece for the Aces. Stewart won two games on the mound in the tournament and batted over .700 to earn the MVP honors.

In the 11-12 year old action, Scott City knocked off the Sikeston Aces 9-7 in seven innings in the loser's bracket contest before downed the All-Stars 6-5 to hand the Sikeston team its first loss of the double-elimination tournament.

After Scott City had taken a 2-0 first- inning lead, the All-Stars bounced back with five in the second. But a Scott City run in the third and three more in the fourth put them back ahead in the see-saw battle.

Sikeston scored twice in the bottom of the sixth to tie the score at 7-7 and take the game into extra innings, but Scott City came back with two in the top of the seventh to win it.

Jim Blattell got the victory over Doug Lambert of the Aces.

Scott City scored twice in the fifth against Sikeston to overcome a 5-4 lead and win it 6-5. Each team scored twice in the first, and the All-Stars tallied three times in the third to make it 5-3. Scott City came back with one in the fourth before rallying for two in the fifth.

Jeff Schwettman got the victory in relief, with Nick Garner taking the loss.

The Sikeston All-Stars used a three-run homer by John Watkins in the seventh inning to advance to the finals of the tournament. Sikeston had to come from behind to tie the game in the sixth, then Watkins' blast gave them a 10-7 victory over the Illmo-Scott City Nationals.

The hosts reached starting hurler Bobby Casey for four runs in the first inning. A five-run fifth by the All-Stars did give them a temporary 6-4 lead, but Scott City quickly erased that. They scored three in the bottom of the fifth and led 7-6 going into the last frame.

Watkins ripped a single with nobody out and eventually scored the run that sent the game into extra-innings. Then, the Sikeston leadoff man and catcher belted the game winner in the seventh.

Friday night in the 11 and 12 year old tournament, the Sikeston Aces swept a pair from the Cape Nationals and Cape Americans.

Marland Beaudean's one out double in the last inning enabled Sikeston to score three rusn and beat Cape's Nationals 4-3. The Aces were trailing 3-1 coming in, whereupon singles by David Braden, Doug Chessor and an error by the Cape pitcher on a ball hit by Tim Lambert loaded the bases. Beaudean's blast cleared the bases and made a winner out of pitcher Mike Hurley. Hurley tossed a three-hitter. Cape scored all of their runs in the top of the first.

David Braden had a single and double and Doug Chessor had two singles to lead the seven-hit Sikeston attack.

Since the Aces were involved in the losers' bracket, they were forced to come right back in a second game and they did, beating the Cape Americans 11-8. Sikeston raced to a 5-1 first frame lead, then had to withstand a four-run Cape sixth to pick up the win. Shane Deal was Sikeston's winning pitcher.

Cleanup man Doug Chessor was the hitting star, going two-for-two with four runs scored. Chessor and Tim Lambert, contributed doubles to the Sikeston hitting splurge.

Cape outhit Sikeston 10-7, but the Aces scored in every inning but the third while advancing in the tournament.

The Sikeston nine and ten year old All-Stars walloped Jackson 15-3 in a four-inning game shortened by the ten-run rule.

Doyle Hutton went the route, tossing a one-hitter. Hutton, Lannie Little and Damon Deal all came up with three hits apiece as Sikeston hitters sprayed 15 safeties over the ballpark.

Sikeston scored eight times in the first, then five more in the third for the runaway decision. They scored at least one run in every inning.

The Sikeston nine and ten year old Aces made it four Sikeston teams in the tournament finals by blanking 10-0 on a shutout by Chris Stewart. Joey McRoy, Sikeston's centerfielder, belted two doubles and Stewart had a double and a triple.

Sikeston scored seven runs in the first, then added three more in the third. The game was stopped after four by the ten-run rule.

Four-way race expected in North

SEMO Conference, North Division coaches seem to think that it's going to be a four-team race for the conference title in the upcoming football campaign. Seven of the eight high schools were represented at the coaches' press conference held Friday in the University Center at SEMO University in Cape. The voting coaches picked Sikeston's Bulldogs for the top spot in the race, but Jackson, Poplar Bluff and Cape Central weren't far behind.

Here is the voting tabulation, with fewest votes indicating highest standing:

RANK TEAM (VOTES)
1. Sikeston Bulldogs (11)
2. Jackson Indians (12)
3. Poplar Bluff Mules (16)
4. Cape Central Tigers (19)
5. Perryville Pirates (37)
6. Charleston Blue Jays (39)
7. Dexter Bearcats (39)
8. Kennett Indians (41)

The Dexter Bearcats, of course, are the newest addition to the conference. Charleston was voted so low for the reason that only seven of the eight schools were represented. With just over a week before summer practices start, the Jays don't have a head man.

The favorites from Sikeston return ten starters from last year's 6-4 team. Coach Terry Smith will have more size to work with than any Sikeston coach in the last ten years and, for this reason, the conference coaches look for the veteran Sikeston leader to continue the improvement he has caused in the Bulldog program.

"We lost 22 seniors off last year's team," pointed out Smith, always ready to see the dark side. But he is right. Last year's team was the most dedicated and hard-working bunch of athletes at SHS in recent years. The 1976 squad members are making the same kind of noises. It'll be up to them and their coaches to keep the ball rolling.

Jackson's Indians also suffered heavy losses through graduation. Eighteen seniors left last year's 9-1 team, including the whole backfield of quarterback Rick Law and runners Rob Goodwin, Mark Dumey and Tom McDowell. Jackson is smaller than Sikeston, but the same was true last year when the little, but super-strong Jackson players ripped the Bulldogs 14-0.

"Mike Gohn will be our top player this year," stated coach Paul Webber. Gohn, a 6-foot-2, 190-pounder who started a year ago, will move from defensive end to linebacker.

The Poplar Bluff Mules will lack experience but will still be strong according the coaches. Head man Tom Telle lost scatback Mike Moss to graduation and Ole Mizzou and it will be up to part time starter David Webb to fill his shoes. Tight end Mark Harrell and defensive back Bud Fritts are other standout players for the Mules.

"We'll have 12 lettermen back," said Telle.

"I'm going to push Harrell, Webb and Fritts for state honors," he added, indicating that there are still several quality players at Poplar Bluff despite graduation losses.

"We ought to be very strong on the offensive line," was coach Gary Emmendorfer's evaluation of his Cape Central Tigers. Cape finished 4-5-1 a year ago and lost 20 lettermen, with ten coming back.

"We're going to have to depend on a lot of juniors," said Emmendorfer, indicating he'll go with transfer student Rick Sippel at quarterback. Sippel, a senior, is a transfer student from Parkway Central High School in St. Louis County.

The separation from the top four and bottom four in conference is great, with the difference sharply defined in the voting. Perryville, Charleston, Dexter and Kennett are all within four votes of each other, indicating the fifth spot in the finish should be a tossup.

"He can really throw the ball," said Perryville coach L. L. Baker about his returning quarterback, Mike Wilson. The Buccos have fifteen lettermen returning from last year's team.

Charleston has no coach, but the speed of Phil and Clint Clark and the presence of several other quality athletes returning from last year show that the Blue-and-White squad could be tough.

"I wouldn't have taken the job without the move," said coach Tom Thrower about Dexter's move into the North Division. "A lot of folks think we've been thrown to the wolves, but I feel we need to compete on this level.

"My team will be young, but we've got a real strong junior class. It may take us a little while to be a factor."

Thrower returns 25 lettermen from last year's 2-8 team.

Kennett, a last place finisher a year ago and picked to repeat, will return 14 lettermen from a 1-9 team. Coach Jim McCarthy will count on returning signal caller Joe Bartmess to run his offense. Stuart McKeel will be the top receiver.

Caruthersville was the early pick for the South crown.

"We just blew it last year," said coach Harv Welch. "We've got some big holes to fill."

But, his fellow coaches evidently disagree. Other top picks were Chaffee, who returns 20 of 22 starters and always-tough Illmo-Scott City.

We will examine further the Southern Division next week.

KINGMAN IN BELMONT?

ELMONT, N. Y. (AP) — M. Donald Grant, chairman of the board of the New York Mets, got a kick out of a baseball fan in the walking enclosure during Belmont Stakes day at Belmont Park here. As the 10 three-year-olds were leaving the saddling ring, the fan said: "Kingman would beat every one of them."

The reference applied to slugger Dave Kingman who the previous night in Los Angeles had hit three home runs to snap a Met losing streak.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Gene Mauch, manager of the Minnesota Twins, certainly has seen baseball in more cities than many people. He came up as a major league rookie infielder with the 1944 Brooklyn Dodgers. Since then he has been connected with eight other teams.

Mauch also played for the Pittsburgh Pirates, Chicago Cubs, Boston Braves, St. Louis Cardinals and Boston Red Sox. He managed the Philadelphia Phillies and Montreal Expos before taking over the reins with the Twins.

Spencer's triple sends Royals down to defeat

CHICAGO (AP) — Jim Spencer smashed a two-run triple in the eighth inning to lift the Chicago White Sox to a 5-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday.

Spencer's hit capped a threerun rally and gave Francisco Barrios his third victory in seven decisions. Barrios scattered seven hits, struck out seven and walked none in pitching his fourth complete game of the season.

Jorge Orta singled home the first run in the eighth-inning rally against reliever Steve Mingori, 3-2, after Chet Lemon singled and Lamar Johnson walked.

After Bill Stein flied out, Spencer delivered his gamewinning hit.

The Royals took a 3-2 lead in the seventh on Ruppert Jones' run-scoring triple and two White Sox' throwing errors.

George Brett led off the Kansas City seventh with a single, went to third on John Mayberry's base hit and scored when Ralph Garr's throw from the outfield got past third baseman Kevin Bell.

The Royals tied the game 2-2 moments later when White Sox first baseman Spencer fielded Hal McRae's ground ball and threw wildly past third in an attempt to nail Mayberry, who adanced on Garr's error. Jones then followed with his triple to score pinch-runner Al Cowens.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the second as Orta singled, advanced to second on Stein's single, went to third on a force play and scored on Bell's sacrifice fly. Johnson drove in the Sox' second run in the sixth after Lemon walked and Garr singled.

Drought and natural, though fairly rare conditions, caused a huge fish kill in late July in Sunshine Lake near Camden in Ray County. The old Missouri River oxbow lake is shallow and when high heat couples with low rainfall, there is an oxygen problem that kills fish. Small farm ponds (and shallow ones of any size) frequently suffer similar fish kills. (Department of Conservation photo)

Saints to close out Bi-State season today

If the weatherman allows, the Sikeston Saints will wrap up their 1976 Bi-State League regular schedule with a doubleheader Sunday afternoon at Herrin, Illinois. The Saints need at least one victory to clinch second place during their first year as a league member.

The twin bill, originally scheduled for May 23, has been rained out on four different occasions. The delays and the necessity of making the contests up because of the league standings have caused the season to be finished some two weeks late.

Starting hurlers have yet to be announced for the Sunday games and Sikeston will be playing without star shortstop Grant Dambach. But, Herrin is a last place team and have dropped their two previous meetings to the Saints by scores of 11-0 and 9-1.

The Saints will go with the same lineup:
1st Rick Eisenbach, SS (.392)
2nd Bill Schatzley, 2B (.301)
3rd Les Schatzley, 3B (.313)
4th Jim Saulter, 1B (.292)
5th Jeff Jackson, DH (.250)
6th Stan Hall, RF (.289)
7th Kenny Urhahn, LF (.242)
8th Charlie Miller, C (.184)
9th Donnie Taylor, CF (.125)

Drought and natural, though fairly rare conditions, caused a huge fish kill in late July in Sunshine Lake near Camden in Ray County. The old Missouri River oxbow lake is shallow and when high heat couples with low rainfall, there is an oxygen problem that kills fish. Small farm ponds (and shallow ones of any size) frequently suffer similar fish kills. (Department of Conservation photo)

Saints to close out Bi-State season today

If the weatherman allows, the Sikeston Saints will wrap up their 1976 Bi-State League regular schedule with a doubleheader Sunday afternoon at Herrin, Illinois. The Saints need at least one victory to clinch second place during their first year as a league member.

The twin bill, originally scheduled for May 23, has been rained out on four different occasions. The delays and the necessity of making the contests up because of the league standings have caused the season to be finished some two weeks late.

Starting hurlers have yet to be announced for the Sunday games and Sikeston will be playing without star shortstop Grant Dambach. But, Herrin is a last place team and have dropped their two previous meetings to the Saints by scores of 11-0 and 9-1.

The Saints will go with the same lineup:
1st Rick Eisenbach, SS (.392)
2nd Bill Schatzley, 2B (.301)
3rd Les Schatzley, 3B (.313)
4th Jim Saulter, 1B (.292)
5th Jeff Jackson, DH (.250)
6th Stan Hall, RF (.289)
7th Kenny Urhahn, LF (.242)
8th Charlie Miller, C (.184)
9th Donnie Taylor, CF (.125)

Deer regulations are explained

JEFFERSON CITY — The Conservation Commission has liberalized its regulations in four of the state's 12 deer management zones to favor landowners.

Units 5, 6, 9 and 12 will have quotas on any- deer permits during the November 13-21 firearms deer season. Bucks will be legal for all hunters but hunters with special permits may take deer of either sex any day of the season.

In previous seasons, farmers could take deer of either sex in a quota unit but only on the land where they resided.

"Because some farmers don't live on land they operate, but provide deer habitat," says Mike Milonski, Wildlife Division chief for the Conservation Department, "the Commission decided that any- deer permits should go to Missouri landowners who don't exactly meet the usual reqiurements.

"So, in the four quota units, any one Missouri resident owning a single tract of 80 acres or more, and one additional member of his immediate household can write the Conservation Department, enclosing a copy of the real property tax receipt, and get an any-deer permit to hunt on the land described in the tax receipt."

These landowners must have the regular firearms deer hunting permit. Farmers hunting on the land where they live do not need a deer hunting permit, but must tag any deer taken with a home- made tag giving their name and address and date of kill and all deer must be checked at a check station.

In another move, the Commission acted to stop abuses of the quota applications. "Quite a few people applied for any - deer permits in the quota units without intending to use them or applied for members of their family who didn't intend to hunt," Milonski says.

"So this year, all applicants must buy a firearms deer hunting permit ($7.90) before they apply. They must include the serial number of the permit on the application."

The quotas are 2,500 permits for Unit 5; 1,700 permits for Unit 9; 1,000 for Unit 6 and 1,500 for Unit 12. Applications will be accepted at the WildlifeDivision, Department of Conservation, North Ten Mile Drive, Jefferson City 65101 between September 3 and October 15.

Applications should be on post cards including name, address, zip code, the unit applied for and the firearms deer hunting permit number. Hunters may apply for only one unit each.

Brown buys half of NBA's Braves

LOUISVILLE (AP) — John Y. Brown, former president of the defunct American Basketball Association, has purchased 50 per cent of the National Basketball Association Buffalo Braves.

Brown, in a telephone interview from Buffalo, N.Y., said he and his wife Ellie, who owned the ABA's Kentucky Colonels before that franchise folded in the wake of the ABA-NBA merger, would share ownership with Paul Snyder. Sn5der confirmed the deal.

A source close to the transaction said the Browns purchased a share of the Buffalo franchise for less than half of the $3.3 million they are to receive in indemnity payments from the NBA. In addition, the Browns will receive television money and the indemnity payment from the NBA, the source said.

Snyder, who had owned 100 per cent of the stock, said he was pleased with the sale. "I feel Mr. Brown has been one of the most experienced owners in professional sports. I consider him one of the most creditable people in the industry, and we have a lot of the same philosophy about the sport and the industry," Snyder said.

Snyder will remain presdient of the team and Brown, 42, will assume chairmanship of the team' board of directors, Snyder said. "I'll handle basketball and the league affairs and Mr. Snyder will handle the financial affairs," Brown said.

Brown said the purchase "keeps our foot in the door" for a possible return of professional basketball to Louisville.

Snyder had earlier tried to move the Braves to Florida, but that proposal was blocked by the NBA.

Brown said if the city doesn't meet its commitments to the club—including a guaranteed sale of 5,000 season tickets by opening day in October—the club might consider moving.

"It doesn't necessarily mean we'll move, but it gives us the right to move," Brown said. He said Louisville, Cincinnati and Miami would probably get the first chance at the new franchise.

Brown, however, warned that Louisville would have to demonstrate "community support" and probably would have to build a new arena in order to lure another franchise.

Snyder admitted that Brown was able to enter the NBA at a considerably lower price then were other ABA owners, but "I knew he wasn't going to join without an attractive offer.

"We've talked to each other off and on, but only in last few days did we reach a definitive contract," Snyder said.

Brown, who chopped Kentucky's payroll considerably during the last year the franchise operated, said that more of the same was in line in Buffalo.

"There will have to be an evaluation, because they have a high payroll," he said. "Since a lot of players are available, this is something we're going to consider ... how to get the payroll manageable."

MANTLE SHOOTS A 76

FREEPORT, Grand Bahamas (AP) — Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle was serious about his role as marshall in a recent golf tournament for insurance agents here. The former New York Yankee stand-out shot a 76 over the Grand Bahama Hotel and Country Club course.

Browns blast Falcons

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Halfback Gregg Pruitt scored two touchdowns, one a 38-yarder on Cleveland's first play from scrimmage, and the Browns defeated the Atlanta Falcons 31-7 in a National Football League preseason game Saturday afternoon.

The game was played at Lewis Field on the Oklahoma State University campus, where Pruitt had some of his best games as a two-time All-American for rival Oklahoma.

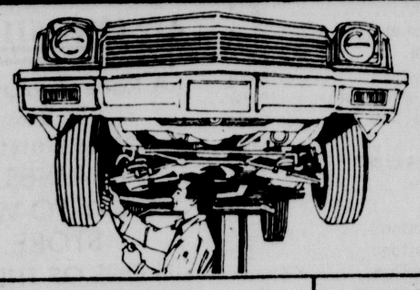

Pruitt, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in his third pro season last year, showed he hadn't lost any of his dazzling speed as he burst through a big hole up the middle and raced into the end zone virtually untouched for the game's first score with 13:26 left in the first quarter.

The Browns, blanked in their preseason opener last week by Baltimore 21-0, charged to a 14-0 first-period lead over the Falcons. Pruitt had first down runs of 4 and 16 yards and quarterback Mike Phipps completed key passes of 9 and 16 yards to Oscar Roan and Paul Warfield before Cleo Miller's four-yard TD run.

A frantic Cleveland pass rush kept Atlanta and quarterback Steve Bartkowski bottled up except for one second-quarter scoring drive that cut the deficit to 14-7 at the half.

MANTLE SHOOTS A 76

FREEPORT, Grand Bahamas (AP) — Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle was serious about his role as marshall in a recent golf tournament for insurance agents here. The former New York Yankee standout shot a 76 over the Grand Bahama Hotel and Country Club course.

Upon being made an honorary member of the President's Honor Club, Mantle received a ring with four diamonds in it from Herbert L. DePrenger, president of Reserve Life Insurance Co., of Dallas. Mickey has 12 similar rings, the number of World Series in which he has played.

Last and 150th golfer to tee off the first day in the four-day 1976 U.S. Open golf championship was pro Calvin Peete of South Bay, Fla.

Two teammates during 1939 Buffalo, N.Y., high school days — Ray Borowicz and Warren Spahn — coached baseball this spring. Hall of Famer Spahn was a pitching coach in Japan. Borowicz coached Huntiongton, N.Y. High for the 17th season.

Deer regulations are explained

JEFFERSON CITY — The Conservation Commission has liberalized its regulations in four of the state's 12 deer management zones to favor landowners.

Units 5, 6, 9 and 12 will have quotas on any- deer permits during the November 13-21 firearms deer season. Bucks will be legal for all hunters but hunters with special permits may take deer of either sex any day of the season.

In previous seasons, farmers could take deer of either sex in a quota unit but only on the land where they resided.

"Because some farmers don't live on land they operate, but provide deer habitat," says Mike Milonski, Wildlife Division chief for the Conservation Department, "the Commission decided that any- deer permits should go to Missouri landowners who don't exactly meet the usual reqiurements.

"So, in the four quota units, any one Missouri resident owning a single tract of 80 acres or more, and one additional member of his immediate household can write the Conservation Department, enclosing a copy of the real property tax receipt, and get an any-deer permit to hunt on the land described in the tax receipt."

These landowners must have the regular firearms deer hunting permit. Farmers hunting on the land where they live do not need a deer hunting permit, but must tag any deer taken with a home- made tag giving their name and address and date of kill and all deer must be checked at a check station.

In another move, the Commission acted to stop abuses of the quota applications. "Quite a few people applied for any - deer permits in the quota units without intending to use them or applied for members of their family who didn't intend to hunt," Milonski says.

"So this year, all applicants must buy a firearms deer hunting permit ($7.90) before they apply. They must include the serial number of the permit on the application."

The quotas are 2,500 permits for Unit 5; 1,700 permits for Unit 9; 1,000 for Unit 6 and 1,500 for Unit 12. Applications will be accepted at the WildlifeDivision, Department of Conservation, North Ten Mile Drive, Jefferson City 65101 between September 3 and October 15.

Applications should be on post cards including name, address, zip code, the unit applied for and the firearms deer hunting permit number. Hunters may apply for only one unit each.

Brown buys half of NBA's Braves

LOUISVILLE (AP) — John Y. Brown, former president of the defunct American Basketball Association, has purchased 50 per cent of the National Basketball Association Buffalo Braves.

Brown, in a telephone interview from Buffalo, N.Y., said he and his wife Ellie, who owned the ABA's Kentucky Colonels before that franchise folded in the wake of the ABA-NBA merger, would share ownership with Paul Snyder. Sn5der confirmed the deal.

A source close to the transaction said the Browns purchased a share of the Buffalo franchise for less than half of the $3.3 million they are to receive in indemnity payments from the NBA. In addition, the Browns will receive television money and the indemnity payment from the NBA, the source said.

Snyder, who had owned 100 per cent of the stock, said he was pleased with the sale. "I feel Mr. Brown has been one of the most experienced owners in professional sports. I consider him one of the most creditable people in the industry, and we have a lot of the same philosophy about the sport and the industry," Snyder said.

Snyder will remain presdient of the team and Brown, 42, will assume chairmanship of the team' board of directors, Snyder said. "I'll handle basketball and the league affairs and Mr. Snyder will handle the financial affairs," Brown said.

Brown said the purchase "keeps our foot in the door" for a possible return of professional basketball to Louisville.

Snyder had earlier tried to move the Braves to Florida, but that proposal was blocked by the NBA.

Brown said if the city doesn't meet its commitments to the club—including a guaranteed sale of 5,000 season tickets by opening day in October—the club might consider moving. "It doesn't necessarily mean we'll move, but it gives us the right to move," Brown said. He said Louisville, Cincinnati and Miami would probably get the first chance at the new franchise.

Brown, however, warned that Louisville would have to demonstrate "community support" and probably would have to build a new arena in order to lure another franchise.

Snyder admitted that Brown was able to enter the NBA at a considerably lower price then were other ABA owners, but "I knew he wasn't going to join without an attractive offer.

"We've talked to each other off and on, but only in last few days did we reach a definitive contract," Snyder said.

Brown, who chopped Kentucky's payroll considerably during the last year the franchise operated, said that more of the same was in line in Buffalo.

"There will have to be an evaluation, because they have a high payroll," he said. "Since a lot of players are available, this is something we're going to consider ... how to get the payroll manageable."

Browns blast Falcons

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Halfback Gregg Pruitt scored two touchdowns, one a 38-yarder on Cleveland's first play from scrimmage, and the Browns defeated the Atlanta Falcons 31-7 in a National Football League preseason game Saturday afternoon.

The game was played at Lewis Field on the Oklahoma State University campus, where Pruitt had some of his best games as a two-time All-American for rival Oklahoma.

Pruitt, who rushed for more than 1,000 yards in his third pro season last year, showed he hadn't lost any of his dazzling speed as he burst through a big hole up the middle and raced into the end zone virtually untouched for the game's first score with 13:26 left in the first quarter.

The Browns, blanked in their preseason opener last week by Baltimore 21-0, charged to a 14-0 first-period lead over the Falcons. Pruitt had first down runs of 4 and 16 yards and quarterback Mike Phipps completed key passes of 9 and 16 yards to Oscar Roan and Paul Warfield before Cleo Miller's four-yard TD run.

A frantic Cleveland pass rush kept Atlanta and quarterback Steve Bartkowski bottled up except for one second-quarter scoring drive that cut the deficit to 14-7 at the half.

after question.

Where and what did they eat during the convention stay?

Which hotel did they stay at?

Did they visit any hospitality suites for a beer, a cocktail, a sandwich?

How high did their fever rise?

And did they get a headache, chills and cough?

The sleuths also, just as carefully, contacted hundreds of legionnaires who didn't become ill. They asked exactly the same questions to find out why and how they were spared.

"We want to know what occurred, how the agent was transferred to the affected group," explains Dr. William Parkin, the state's chief epidemiologist.

Did someone come to the convention already infected?

"I don't know," Bachman says, then adds:

"Until we find the virus we are going to have a hard time working on that. Maybe someone was harboring a virus that for some reason became virulent."

The first death came Tuesday, July 27.

Ray Brennan, 61, who lived in Athens near the New York border, had been feeling poorly even while he attended Legion meetings. He died three days after the convention. Listed cause: heart attack brought on by lung failure and pneumonia.

The sickness — high temperature, chills, headache, dry cough — began to fell other legionnaires.

It was a silent attack.

Four died Friday, July 30 — William Baird, 82, Bloomsburg; Frank Aveni, 60, Clearfield; Francis Grove, 70, Altoona, and Charles Chamberlain, 48, Chambersburg. Others were hospitalized.

Dr. Ernest Campbell of Bloomsburg, who was caring for three victims, first suspected typhoid fever and immediately contacted the local health center. He was put off.

"It's Friday afternoon, the weekend in coming," Campbell says he was told. "It's doubtful anything could be done."

Meanwhile, the virulence of the mystery malady was intensifying, and no one yet knew it linked only legionnaires.

Victim No. 6 was counted Saturday, July 31, a week after the Legion gathering. He was Julius Gagginnia, 78, of Republic, and his doctor and his family thought it was just a sudden attack of pneumonia an old man couldn't fight off.

But then last Sunday night, while five more legionnaires were dying, a worried doctor in Williamsport sounded the alarm that finally launched the fullscale epidemic investigation.

Dr. William Ford, treating four patients, relayed his suspicions to the district health director who immediately telephoned the office of communicable diseases in Harrisburg.

"When you've got four patients who had been in the same place come down with what appears to be the same disease, I think that's reason enough to notify them," says Ford.

Based on Ford's data, Dr. William Schrack, former state epidemiologist, got the ball rolling by contacting Legion officials.

By Monday, the worst day when 10 died, the news exploded.

Bachman, making an unplanned brief stop in his office before starting a vacation, was informed of the epidemic nature of the unknown malady and immediately asked for research help from the federal Center for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta.

"I called in every key figure in the department, telling them I wanted to know exactly what's going on," Bachman says.

Two more died on Wednesday, and another two on Thursday.

To prevent panic, Bachman scheduled twice daily news conferences to "give the public good, sound and credible information."

The thin and wiry Bachman, who left his anesthesiologist practice to take the health post in Gov. Milton J. Shapp's cabinet, is a calm, unruffable man. But the epidemic threat worried him, and still does.

Hit light pole

Kenneth Call, 31, of Jackson, (center) lost control of his car about noon Friday while traveling south on Highway 61 North just north of the intersection with North Kingsway. Police said Call lost control and ran off the road into the ditch knocking down a city light pole. He was arrested for driving while intoxicated. Jerry Lynn, left, stopped to help Call. in his church and talks about Jimmy Carter, he's working for Jimmy Carter as far as I'm concerned, and he should be paid for it.... I don't work for no damn politician for nothing."

In a response to the Times story, Jody Powell, Carter's press secretary, said in Plains, Ga., on Saturday that the disbursement of money reported in the Times was "strictly legal and proper."

"It is a common practice in many areas of campaign activities," Powell said. "Every campaign in both parties that I know of expends resources on get-out-the-vote activities and transportation to the polls."

An unidentified Carter campaigner told the Times the endorsements of Richards and his associates was "the largest block endorsement we got in Northern California the whole campaign."

The Times asked Hemmann whether the disbursements to the black ministers represented a contradiction between Carter campaign reality and some of the Democratic presidential nominee's statements during the primary races.

"I guess when Jimmy stood in Maryland and said, 'I don't intend to deal with political hacks,' he was talking about not dealing with white hacks — not black hacks," Hemmann was quoted as saying.

But Powell said Hemmann was speaking in "jest" when he made that statement. It was followed by "a serious response expressing the campaign's disapproval of such practices, our efforts to minimize them and our determination to provide the most extensive documentation of expenditures possible," Powell said.

Richards said he received two $1,000 checks from the Carter campaign, one written to the Oakland Baptist Ministers Union and one to the Mt. Zion Baptist District Association. The other three ministers received checks of $1,000, the Times said.

Kerr attends session on new checkless money system

Dan Kerr, assistant vice president (data processing) at First National Bank of Sikeston, attended the first general meeting of the Mid-America Payment Exchange (MAPEX), held July 27 in St. Louis, on the region's new system in which funds can be transferred automatically -- by means of computers -- instead of by paper checks.

Advantages of the new system and plans for making it known to individuals, businesses, governmental agencies and organizations were among the topics discussed at the meeting.

MAPEX, a service organization for this area, supported by commercial banks, went into operation July 1 and expects to handle some 90,000 transactions in August. They will consist primarily of Social Security payments to individual recipients and Air Force pay.

During the inaugural period, MAPEX will handle payroll checks only, with features covering payment of bills to come later. Arrangements for using the electronic transfer service are made between an individual bank and its customers at the option of the customer.

It was noted during the meeting that the electronic transfer service are made between an individual bank and its customers at the option of the customer.

It was noted during the meeting that the electronic transfer method is widely used in other nations, with an estimated 700 million transactions processed last year in 16 nations in Europe and Asia.

The MAPEX region is the same as the Eighth Federal Reserve District's St. Louis Zone, which includes eastern Missouri, southern Illinois and a part of southwestern Indiana. MAPEX currently has 195 member banks.

Construction begins at new shopping center in Bernie

BERNIE— Construction of the first building of a new shopping center began July 26, after a ribbon-cutting ceremony attended by officers of State Bank of Bernie, and Roy Owens Construction Co. and Ray White, the developer of the shopping center.

The plans for the shopping center, which will be located just south of the Brown Shoe Co. factory on Highway 25 South, include a drive-in bank facility for State Bank of Bernie, a Big Star supermarket and a building supply company.

Although there are definite plans to build a supermarket and a building supply house, no construction date has been set.

The bank facility will have a drive-in window and an inside walk-up window.

Dixie Enterprises begins construction

NEW MADRID — The first speculative shell building to be built in the Bootheel for potential industry is under construction in Dixie Enterprises Inc. Industrial Park, located on the south side of Route U in the city limits of New Madrid.

Joseph D. Whisenhunt of Blytheville, Ark., is the developer of the 50,000 - square foot structure, which is a basic industrial building containing 48,000 square feet of manufacturing space and 2,000 square feet of office area.

The building is built without a floor or mechanical details, such as electricial, plumbing, air heating, etc., but can be easily and quickly tailored to a specific industry's needs.

The facility will occupy a 10-acre site in the 100-acre industrial park, and is designed for ready expansion to 200,000 square feet.

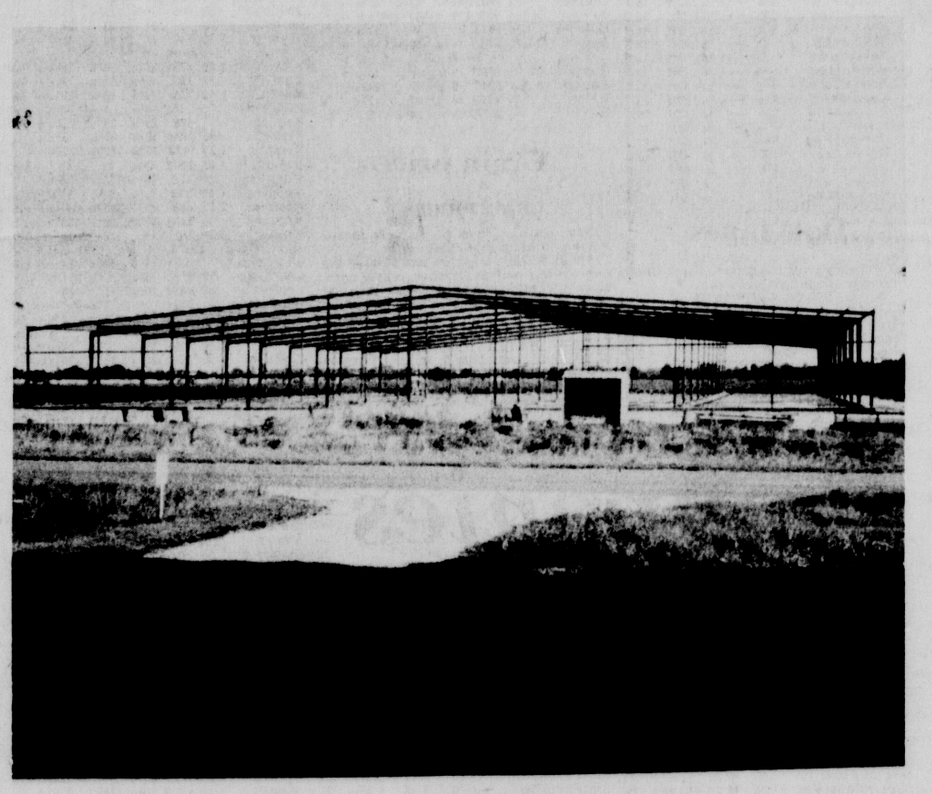

Sam L. Hunter Jr., president of Dixie Enterprises Inc. stated that plans were initiated about a year ago for the construction of such a building to aid in attracting industry and new jobs into the city.

The Bootheel Regional Planning Commission and Economic Development Council at Malden and Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development (CID) in Jefferson City are working closely together to market the shell building.

An informational data sheet, prepared by the CID division is currently being used to inform approximately 2,000 companies identified as potentially interested in available industrial space.

Immediate availability of plant facilities is an important consideration for companies in determining plant locations, according to Scott R. Allen, CID director, who says, "More than half of all manufacturers asking CID to help them find new plant locations in Missouri last year were looking primarily for sites with an available industrial building.

"Thirty- three of 65 companies identified as seriously looking for plant sites in Missouri indicated that available buildings were a critical factor in their location decisions."

Framework shapes up

Framework is shaping upon a 50,000 - square foot shell building under construction for a potential industry in Dixie Enterprises Inc. Industrial Park, located south of Route U in the city limits of New Madrid. The shell building can be quickly completed to meet specifications for immediate availability of a future industrial plant.

Pizza Hut has record sales, income

WICHITA, Kan. — Pizza Hut, Inc. has announced record results for the first quarter of fiscal 1977 which ended June 30.

Net sales for the three months were $71,940,000, an increase of 33 per cent over the restated comparable figure of $54,192,000 for the same period last year.

Net income for the quarter increased 49 per cent to $5,133,000, versus the restated $3,434,000 for the comparable quarter last year. Earnings per share were 62 cents, an increase of 32 per cent over 47 cents a share for the same period last year.

The company recently called all the outstanding 6.25 convertible subordinated debentures due 1995. Assuming the debentures had been converted at the beginning of the first quarter, primary earnings per share would have been 62 cents, and there would have been no change in the fully diluted earnings per share.

As of June 30, there were 2,424 Pizza Hut restaurants in operation in The United States and 11 foreign countries. Of the total, 1,282 were operated by the company, with the remainder operated by franchise holders. Also, a the close of the quarter, there were 158 company and 131 franchised units under various stages of construction.

Underwriter attends advance pension seminar

MONTPELIER, Vt. — James O. Chenoweth, chartered life underwriter of Cape Girardeau, Mo., took part here recently in the advanced pension seminar of his firm, National Life Insurance Co. of Vermont.

The associate of general agent Gerard W. Neiner, CLU, of St. Louis, was among 17 selected field and home office representatives working in the sessions at company headquarters here.

The day and evening courses included pension selling, design, installation and implementation and were led by company and agency specialists in discussions of various pension and profit-sharing plans and their phases and operations.

Chenoweth is a specialist in pension programming and implementation and in life insurance for other business purposes.

He has won a long line of company and life insurance industry awards and memberships and has held such local and regional honors as the presidencies of the Cape Girardeau Life Underwriters Association and the Five-State Chartered Life Underwriter Chapter (he was re-elected recently to head the latter for the second straight year).

Over $6.3 million are paid in health benefits to Missouri residents

CAPE GIRARDEAU — over $6.3 million in health benefit payments was paid to Missouri residents by Mutual of Omaha during the first six months of 1976, according to Mike Jones, manager for the company in Cape Girardeau.

This brings the cumulative total of benefits paid in the state to a record $388 million, Jones noted.

He added that during this same time period nationally, Mutual also reached a historic level with over $6 billion in cumulative benefits paid to policyowners.

Jones, a former Sikeston resident, attributed the continuing rise in health benefit payments to the progress made in broadening the scope of health insurance throughout the United States.

Uniroyal is charged with discrimination

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Labor Department is giving Uniroyal, Inc., 14 days to answer race and sex discrimination charges or face the loss of millions of dollars in government contracts — making it the largest firm ever to face such action.

Uniroyal is one of the nation's largest tire and rubber producers and was among the 100 top defense contractors last year.

The Labor Department announced Thursday that debarment proceedings were being brought against the company, seeking to prevent it from holding existing and future federal contracts.

The action followed unsuccessful efforts to negotiate a settlement with the company, the department said.

Travel center brings new concept in travel service

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The opening of a new Memphis travel organization has been established by one of the community's leading optometrists and educators.

Dr. Irving P. Filderman, a practicing optometrist and member of Memphis State University's faculty, said the first of several Pelabole Travel Centers opened for operation at 699 Mendenhall in East Memphis.

Pelabole — an acronym of the initial letters of the first names of each of Filderman's children — has also opened offices in the First National Bank building at Germantown Road and Poplar Avenue.

'Pelabole- Travel Centers are being established to institutionalize a new concept in travel service to the community," Filderman said. "This concept recognizes that travel services must include research, education and client participation, as well as client support and physical arrangements."

Filderman further emphasizes that "travel has become a much too integral part of the American life- style for travel arrangements to be limited to mere reservations and ticketing reservations. The Pelabole- Travel Centers' physical facilities, personnel and support services are all designed to support and implement this new concept."

Pelabole- Travel Centers' principal offices are situated in a building formerly used by one of the community's banks (City National Bank on Mendenhall), and a drive-in window has been maintained for convenience in client ticket pick-up.

The complex has been designed so as to permit private consultation for both individuals and groups and massive amounts of information and literature have been acquired for their convenience and information.

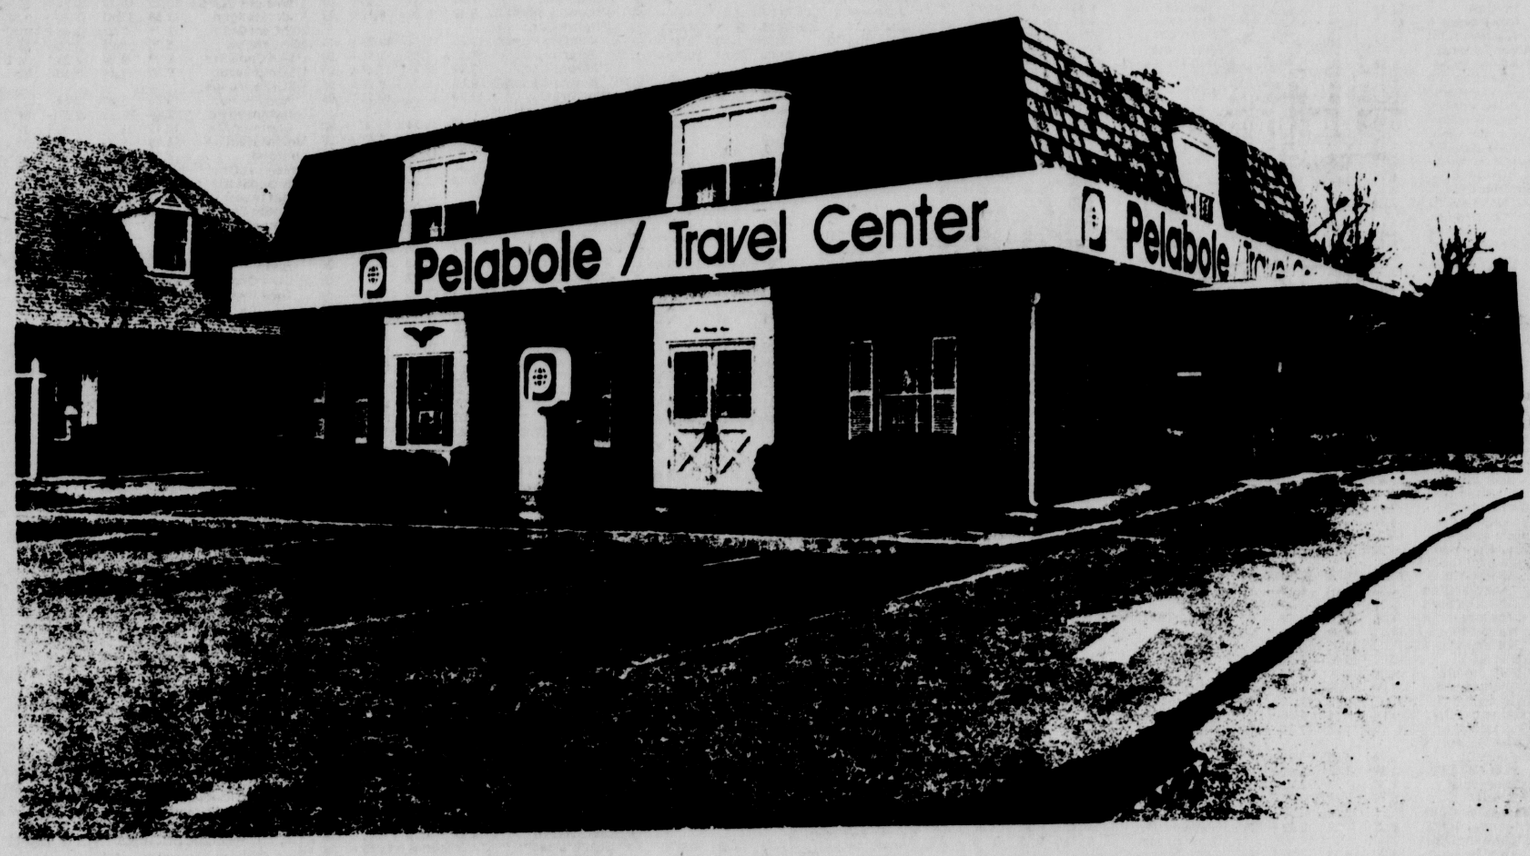

"Pelabole- Travel Centers has been accredited by the several carriers and industry organizations. As such, it is authorized to offer complete reservation and ticketing services in their behalf and receive the commissions which constitute its compensation.

"The client is obligated to pay no more than he would pay the carrier or accommodation; no more or less than he would pay any ethical travel agency.

"In our view," Filderman said, "the client is entitled to more than mere reservation and ticketing services. There should be at his disposal both a body of knowledge and counsel of such scope as to assure his satisfaction and facilities necessary to meet his needs and desires.

Filderman stated that since the Pelabole concept of travel service is dependent on the quality of personnel engaged with the client in planning and evaluating travel opportunities, a number of well-known and distinguished personnel have been associated with the design and conceptualization of this new institution. Some will be associated with it on a part-time and some on a full-time basis. In addition, a highly experienced complement of full-time personnel — whose appointments will be announced in the near future — have been recruited and have helped to develop what 'we believe to be the most complete, most convenient facilities in the community.

Arrangements for downtown offices soon will be completed, he added, and the firm anticipates development of further facilities to meet the needs of its clients.

Kerr attends session on new checkless money system

Dan Kerr, assistant vice president (data processing) at First National Bank of Sikeston, attended the first general meeting of the Mid-America Payment Exchange (MAPEX), held July 27 in St. Louis, on the region's new system in which funds can be transferred automatically -- by means of computers -- instead of by paper checks.

Advantages of the new system and plans for making it known to individuals, businesses, governmental agencies and organizations were among the topics discussed at the meeting.

MAPEX, a service organization for this area, supported by commercial banks, went into operation July 1 and expects to handle some 90,000 transactions in August. They will consist primarily of Social Security payments to individual recipients and Air Force pay.

During the inaugural period, MAPEX will handle payroll checks only, with features covering payment of bills to come later. Arrangements for using the electronic transfer service are made between an individual bank and its customers at the option of the customer.

It was noted during the meeting that the electronic transfer service are made between an individual bank and its customers at the option of the customer.

It was noted during the meeting that the electronic transfer method is widely used in other nations, with an estimated 700 million transactions processed last year in 16 nations in Europe and Asia.

The MAPEX region is the same as the Eighth Federal Reserve District's St. Louis Zone, which includes eastern Missouri, southern Illinois and a part of southwestern Indiana. MAPEX currently has 195 member banks.

Construction begins at new shopping center in Bernie

BERNIE— Construction of the first building of a new shopping center began July 26, after a ribbon-cutting ceremony attended by officers of State Bank of Bernie, and Roy Owens Construction Co. and Ray White, the developer of the shopping center.

The plans for the shopping center, which will be located just south of the Brown Shoe Co. factory on Highway 25 South, include a drive-in bank facility for State Bank of Bernie, a Big Star supermarket and a building supply company.

Although there are definite plans to build a supermarket and a building supply house, no construction date has been set.

The bank facility will have a drive-in window and an inside walk-up window.

Dixie Enterprises begins construction

NEW MADRID — The first speculative shell building to be built in the Bootheel for potential industry is under construction in Dixie Enterprises Inc. Industrial Park, located on the south side of Route U in the city limits of New Madrid.

Joseph D. Whisenhunt of Blytheville, Ark., is the developer of the 50,000 - square foot structure, which is a basic industrial building containing 48,000 square feet of manufacturing space and 2,000 square feet of office area.

The building is built without a floor or mechanical details, such as electricial, plumbing, air heating, etc., but can be easily and quickly tailored to a specific industry's needs.

The facility will occupy a 10-acre site in the 100-acre industrial park, and is designed for ready expansion to 200,000 square feet.

Sam L. Hunter Jr., president of Dixie Enterprises Inc. stated that plans were initiated about a year ago for the construction of such a building to aid in attracting industry and new jobs into the city.

The Bootheel Regional Planning Commission and Economic Development Council at Malden and Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development (CID) in Jefferson City are working closely together to market the shell building.

An informational data sheet, prepared by the CID division is currently being used to inform approximately 2,000 companies identified as potentially interested in available industrial space.

Immediate availability of plant facilities is an important consideration for companies in determining plant locations, according to Scott R. Allen, CID director, who says, "More than half of all manufacturers asking CID to help them find new plant locations in Missouri last year were looking primarily for sites with an available industrial building.

"Thirty- three of 65 companies identified as seriously looking for plant sites in Missouri indicated that available buildings were a critical factor in their location decisions."

Framework shapes up

Framework is shaping upon a 50,000 - square foot shell building under construction for a potential industry in Dixie Enterprises Inc. Industrial Park, located south of Route U in the city limits of New Madrid. The shell building can be quickly completed to meet specifications for immediate availability of a future industrial plant.

Pizza Hut has record sales, income

WICHITA, Kan. — Pizza Hut, Inc. has announced record results for the first quarter of fiscal 1977 which ended June 30.

Net sales for the three months were $71,940,000, an increase of 33 per cent over the restated comparable figure of $54,192,000 for the same period last year.

Net income for the quarter increased 49 per cent to $5,133,000, versus the restated $3,434,000 for the comparable quarter last year. Earnings per share were 62 cents, an increase of 32 per cent over 47 cents a share for the same period last year.

Of the total, 1,282 were operated by the company, with the remainder operated by franchise holders. ADDING INSULT TO INJURY

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau of Canada has attempted to explain the reasons why his government refused to allow the athletes from the Republic of China to participate in the Summer Olympics.

"How would you Americans like it," he asked rather pathetically, "if some small group were to go to the Island of Puerto Rico and then claim that they were the United States of America? You wouldn't like it one bit."

This lame excuse only adds insult to injury. In the first place, the "you" in "wouldn't like it" is, in this case the dictatorship of Red China. Naturally, Dictators have no liking for the Free Chinese. But this does not justify his disgraceful discrimination against the Free Chinese. It is up to the Olympic Committee, not Trudeau, to decide who may participate in the competition.

Secondly, supposing that we did, indeed, suffer the fate of the people of China, and our mainland USA was totally controlled by a dictatorship that suppressed opposition, and took over control of our lives, schools, colleges, newspapers, radio and tv media — and destroyed freedom of speech. Let us suppose that farms were seized, the people were forced off their land and out of their homes into huge, barracks - like "communes" with the overseer — or slavemaster, if you will — forcing people to work from dawn to dark, in return for which the government would provide everything that slaves once were given: "free" housing, "free" food, "free" medical care and even a "free" burial.

Then, supposing 15 million Americans managed to escape to a convenient island, and that they took with them the flag, the Constitution, the laws, the freedoms and the liberties we now enjoy. And on their refugee island they were free to own property, to buy and sell and trade with other nations and to prosper.

How, indeed, Mr. Trudeau, would the unfortunate captives on mainland USA feel? Would not we be grateful that some of our people had managed to escape and salvage the free spirit of our country and to preserve its heritage? Would not our people risk their very lives to escape from captive America and flee to the freedom of our country in exile? And would we not pray that they would some day return, together with the freedom that had been taken from us by force?

We most certainly would — even as the Chinese captive people do today.

If Mr. Trudeau doesn't know how we Americans would feel if we were enslaved by Communism, then he is much more stupid than we thought.

THE CRAFTMAN'S CREED

While we hear mostly about consumer protection as viewed by various government agencies, we believe the majority of working people find their satisfaction in doing a good job. The Craftsman's Creed written by Dr. Frank Crane spells this out and deserves another reading:

"I BELIEVE IN WORK: I believe in doing the kind of work that is of real use. I believe that one of the best tests of whether work is useful or not is that people are willing to pay money for it.

"I believe in work that is of value to people now living, that I am a part of this generation, that I should serve my contemporaries and cooperate with them, and that the best assurance that my work will be appreciated by posterity is that it is of practical worth now. I believe that I have a right to expect pay for my labor, my chief concern is to do my work well, as the joy of good work well done is the highest form of satisfaction.

"I believe that the most dependable kind of happiness is that which is a by-product of work; that no pay is worthwhile unless it refreshes and restores the power and disposition to work and that no rest is sweet unless it is earned by work. I believe no man can do good work unless he loves it. I believe no man can do good work unless he submits to training and practice. I believe that all work done in love, and following training and practice, will be beautiful. I believe that the perfectly useful is always beautiful--that whatever is beautiful is useful.

"I believe that no man lives unto himself nor can do his best work by himself; for he must learn of his masters, he must cooperate with his fellow Craftsmen and he must produce something that shall be valuable to the people.

"I believe in no class, party, nor privilege, but that every man should be judged by his work, and that he is entitled to inner character and his outward product. I believe that God is no idle King, seeking the adulation which kings crave, nor indulging in the petty pleasures of a monarch's vanity; but that He is the infinite Worker, expressing Himself in the creation and continuous upkeep of His universe and finding His job in the forthputting of His almighty energy.

"I believe that I imitate Him, and am worthy to be called a son of God, only as I also in my small corner, do my work and find joy in it. I believe that every human being was born to do some kind of good work, and that in doing it he finds his best excuse for living, and the most intelligent answer to the question, 'Why was I born?"

WE'RE BEING DUPED AGAIN

This newspaper has for years advocated campaign reform with emphasis on the need to control the amount of funds expended for the election of candidates.

We had believed that the 1974 Federal Campaign Reform Act was at least a partial step in the right direction by the Supreme Court recently struck down important provisions of the measure, opening the doors again for a return to the old practices.

The ruling gives the wealthy candidate a constitutional right to buy an election by spending unlimited amounts from his own pocket, while others must raise funds under the applicable contribution limits.

The court's decision also permits contributors to spend unlimited amounts on behalf of specific candidates as long as they do not coordinate such expenditures with the candidates' own campaign committees.

The Supreme Court's rejection of limitations on expenditures by candidates and independent individuals and groups has magnified the inequities that exist under the law between classes of candidates. On the one hand, wealthy candidates or candidates having the support of well-organized, well-financed political action groups, such as the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, can now spend unlimited sums in the promotion of their candidates.

On the other hand, candidates without private means or without support of such groups are limited to contributions that may not exceed $1,000 from individuals or $5,000 from political action committees. In practice, this has provided enormous handicaps in raising the kind of seed money that is especially important in launching the campaign of a candidate who is relatively unknown.

It is apparent that we need corrective legislation. There is a rush on now in Congress to do something about these problems but it would be folly to accept a proposal that would do even more harm to the election process.

Thus, we find reason to oppose the so-called "campaign reform" bill, known as HR 12015 now moving through Congress. Even though the present law is weighted in big labor's favor, the measure now up for passage would give the labor bosses almost virtual control of American politics. We mustn't let this happen.

Columnist Victor Riesel estimates that big labor spent more than $50 million in 1968 in its unsuccessful effort to elect Hubert Humphrey--and the actual total probably was as much as $90 million due to the union loophole as "in kind" contributions. Very little of that campaign spending ever was reported.

HR 12015 would only serve to enlarge such loopholes and should be defeated. If it does pass the Congress a presidential veto is in order. The American people deserve real campaign reform and not a flim-flam effort that provides more loopholes for the big labor bosses.

FEDERAL SPENDING SPREE

According to a world economic service, it is small wonder than an economic recovery is underway in the U.S. The government is throwing money around and letting if tall where it may. The budget deficit for the current year will be a record $75 billion. In the 200-year history of the U.S., budget deficits never even came close to that figure. Next year calls for more of the same. In the three fiscal years, 1975, 1976, and 1977 the total federal deficit will be greater than the cumulative deficit of the past 25 years.

It's always fun to go on a spending spree, but the enjoyment is soon forgotten when the bills come due. We guess every family has gone through that experience at least once. But the government pays no heed to lessons learned, even in the most recent past. Heavy budget deficits in the early 1970's led to the worst inflation in modern times. It took the deepest recession since the 1930's to bring inflation down to its present unsatisfactory high rate. The current string of budget deficits will inflict a severe burden on consumers and financial markets in the future years.

There are already signs of a rekindling of inflation. However, it will probably be several months before this is viewed as a serious problem again. Wholesale prices have been edging up. Labor settlements have been way out of line compared to current inflation levels. If the recovery picks up steam, it is highly probable that there will be an increase in industrial and commodity prices. After all, if corporations were able to boost prices in the midst of the most severe recession in 40 years, what is going to restrain them when demand picks up and capacity gets tight?

There may well be that worldwide forces will lead to a serious new round of inflation in 1977 and beyond. The European economy has been much slower in recovering from the recession than the United States. But there has already been a smart pickup in business in Germany, and France and other key countries are now beginning to snap out of it. As the United States recovery gains momentum, U.S. imports from Europe, and other countries producing raw materials, will rise. This in turn will stimulate demand in these countries and help feed the recovery already underway. So you can see that if the business recovery maintains its present pace, we will be right back on inflation's doorstep before too many months have passed.

The question that candidates for Congress and the Presidency would rather not hear at this time:

"Then what?"

"IT WASN'T YOUR FAULT, DEAR"

When wives run foul of traffic laws,
The men are loud in their guffaws;
But turn the tables—some man's blamed,
And then, by golly, he's been framed;
And though the wives may feel some glee,
They wisely hand out sympathy.

As a freshman from the North attending a college in the heart of Dixie, my friend decided that the best way to get along in the South was to develop the accent of the region. His first attempt, after a little practice, was to ask the local post-office clerk, in a simulated Southern drawl, for some ten-cent stamps. Receiving the stamps, he folded them and placed them in his wallet, which he slipped into his hip pocket.

Observing this, the clerk said in a genuine Southern drawl, "Up nawth you'all may be able to do that, but down heah they'll stick togethah."

IN PRAISE OF VIOLENCE

WASHINGTON— The National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting has issued a survey of violence on TV. The committee, headed by Nicholas Johnson, the former FCC Commissioner, monitored television for six weeks and came to the conclusion the most violent shows they saw were S.W.A.T., The Rookies, Sara, The ABC Sunday Movie, The CBS Friday Movie, The Rockford Files, Starsky and Hutch, McMillian-Columbo, NBC Saturday Night Movie and Joe Forrester. How they missed Kojak, Hawaii Five-O and The Streets of San Francisco I'll never know.

But they came up with another interesting bit of research. Using the definition of TV violence modeled on a system devised by Dr. George Gerbner of the University of Pennsylvania they discovered the most frequent sponsors of this type of show were Colgate-Palmolive products, Gillette hair products, Breck shampoo, Ford Motor Co., Johnson and Johnson, American Motors and Lysol.

It seems to me that those of us who enjoy violence on television should thank the people who make it all possible.

Too often we sit back in our chairs after seeing a girl raped or a policeman shot down in cold blood on TV and fail to say I think I'll write the sponsor of that show a letter and tell him how much it pleased me. After all sponsors people, and when they bring us blood and gore they want to know how much the audience appreciated it.

Since I know you're all busy people I have typed up some form letters that you can clip ut and send to a few of the companies who make all these violence-prone shows possible.

"President, Colgate-Palmolive:

"Dear Sir,

"I just wanted to tell you how much our entire family enjoyed the program you sponsored the other night where the man was buried in sand and the villian poured honey on his head so the ants would eat him. We also enjoyed the film the other night which showed this psychopathic killer who got his jollies from blowing up people's cars. My son Fred duplicated the bomb the killer made with stuff he found in our kitchen. Not only are the shows you sponsor exciting but they are also educational, and we assure you as long as you stick with violence we'll stick with Colgate toothpaste."

"Chairman of the Board, Gillette hair products:

"Dear Sir,

"You probably don't hear from too many satisfied viewers, but I want you to know that every time we see a Gillette commercial interspersed in a program where someone is kidnaped, mugged or killed, we make a mental note to buy your product. I realize you don't make these shows yourselves, but the fact that you have the good taste to advertise on them is enough for us. Keep up the good work."

"President, Breck shampoo:

"Dear Sir,

"I saw a movie Sunday night on ABC where 14 cowboys were killed in four minutes. There was blood all over the place and it was a real turn-on. I asked my wife how ABC could afford to pay for that kind of entertainment and she said, 'Don't thank ABC, thank Breck. They paid for it.' So that's what we're doing. Stay with violence. If you change to comedy we'll stop using your shampoo."

"Henry Ford, Detroit:

"Dear Mr. Ford,

"I see your name in the papers a lot, but I never thought I'd be writing to you. I just saw the scariest show on television. A madman was holding 13 people hostage and he kept killing them one at a time with a knife. You probably weren't even aware of it, but Ford was one of the sponsors. I want you to know how proud I am that you would have your product associated with this kind of program. It shows you're not intimidated by the small segment of the population who think violence on TV is bad for our children. I say stick to your guns. Kids don't buy cars anyway."

(You can write the above letter to American Motors as well.)

"President, Johnson & Johnson:

Dear Sir,

"I liked the show the other night you sponsored where a crooked cop crashed his car into a camper and killed the entire family. Then he made it look like a petty thief was the hit-and-run driver. It was a corker full of action and must have sold a warehouse of Johnson & Johnson baby powder. Looking forward to what you're sponsoring next week. I hope it has a guy slugging a woman around. I guess I enjoy that kind of violence more than anything."

These are only a few samples, but I'm certain the heads of companies who buy time on violent TV shows are anxious to hear from you. It makes them feel all the money and time they have invested has really paid off.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Who are the real Rip-Offs? -- A national Labor Chief's opinioin

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is the militant leader of some 800,000 public employes, members of the fastest growing national union in the state-municipal sector. He was the sole AFL-CIO leader to speak at the Democratic National Convention.

By JERRY WURF
President of American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO

WASHINGTON, D. C. — When my old friend Victor Riesel asks me to do a guest column, I think back to the days when he was earning his reputation as a courageous labor reporter and I was cutting my teeth as a labor organizer.

In those days, the leading press critic in New York City was a man named A. J. Leibling. If there were a way to force every journalist in the land (including Victor Riesel) to reread Leibling, I'd be all for it.

"There is no concept more generally cherished by publishers than that of the Undeserving Poor," Leibling wrote in 1947. Then -- as now -- the newspapers were filled with reports of welfare mothers living off the fat of the land on the taxpayers' money. But, as Leibling noted, if there is one myth more cherished than the "undeserving poor," it is the "deserving rich." Stories about a wealthy individual or a giant corporation bilking the public appear on page 78 of the Sunday paper.

I love newspapers, but I'm scared to death of what might happen if people actually believed them. Over the last few years, the "undeserving poor" have kept making their appearances in the media (including Victor Riesel's column). They've been joined by "the overpaid worker" -- especially the pampered public employe who's living it up on less than $10,000 a year, while his older brother retires in luxury on Social Security and a $3,000 pension.

Who's really ripping off the taxpayer? Is it the recipient of social services -- and that's all of us, but especially the unemployed, the impoverished, the handicapped, the elderly, the ailing and the very young? Is it the worker who provides public services, such as cleaning the streets, inspecting milk and meat, purifying the water supply, providing health care and expediting unemployment benefits? Or are the real culprits some more fortunate people and businesses who don't appear as often in the headlines and on the 6 o'clock news?

Health care costs, for example, are rising at an astronomical rate -- higher than other items in the cost of living. Medical services soak up at least 7 per cent of the nation's wealth, even though America lacks the comprehensive system of health care found in Great Britain, West Germany, Sweden and other advanced industrtial democracies.

When the problem of skyrocketing health care costs has been discussed in the press, the emphasis has been on increasing demand by recipients of Medicare, Medicaid and other services. Or hospital spokesmen have been quoted on the increases in health care workers' earnings from the unconscionably low levels of the past to the modest but adequate levels that unions have negotiated in some major cities.

"Follow the money" was the watchword for Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward when they tracked down the men behind Watergate. This rule would be a worthy guideline for journalists searching for the real culprits behind skyrocketing health care costs. The money trail leads first to high-paid professionals, like practicing physicians, whose average income approaches $50,000, and clinical Pathologists, who earn a staggering $200,000 a year. It leads to overpaid hospital administrators, overbedded hospitals, and the insurance and pharmaceutical companies, which are earning record profits.

With the $32.4-billion-a-year Medicare program, the litany of waste, abuse, mistreatment and even outright theft would fill several volumes. According to U.S. News and World Report, corrupt practices may cost as much as $1 in every $10 spent on a program whose original -- and worthy -- purpose was to aid indigent and elderly patients. Grand juries in New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio and other states are investigating abuses such as bill padding, kickbacks and unnecessary treatment.

Corrupt doctors, pharmacists, laboratories and health care facilities are responsible for these abuses, as even the conservative U.S. News and World Report acknowledges. After all, they're in a better position than elderly patients or $8,000-a-year hospital workers to pad bills, kick back laboratory fees and embezzle Medicare reimbursements.

The costliest abuses of all occur in private nursing homes, many of which receive public funds to care for patients discharged from local hospitals. A U.S. Senate subcommittee has concluded that there are no standards of decency in the industry despite -- or more likely because of -- the $7.5 billion in Medicare and Medicaid funds that pour into the coffers of nursing home operators each year.

In New York state, the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare has moved to deny Medicare funds to 69 nursing homes that violate minimal standards. Nursing home magnate Bernard Bergman has been charged with substandard care, excessive payments for supplies, nepotistic hiring practices and fraudulent ownership changes in his facilities.

The gruesome spectacle of profiteers speculating on human misery should convince America that health care is too important to be entrusted to unregulated private businesses. But the same pattern of substandard services and excessive charges prevails in other public services -- from child care to street cleaning – that have been farmed out to profitmaking companies. In social programs entrusted to private businesses or administered by public agencies without the proper accountability, high-paid professionals and outside companies have ripped off the taxpayers' money.

This story is well worth reporting – and it has not received the coverage it deserves. It is part of the case for reforming social services – for building in good management, cost controls and public accountability. But rip-offs by the privileged are no reason to deny services to the needy or decency to the men and women who provide these services.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Climate Changes Concern Soviets

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has been spurred by a U.S. intelligence report to launch an urgent study of global climate changes.

The Central Intelligence Agency warned in a 1974 report of the possibility of "a detrimental global climatic change." Pointing out that "the stability of most nations is based on a dependable source of food," the report declares tersely: "This stability will not be possible under the new climatic era."

The CIA quoted even more alarming language from a University of Wisconsin forecast that "the earth's climate is returning to ... an era of drought, famine and political unrest in the western world."

A CIA spokesman tried to downplay the doomsday report. "It's really a view of one author," he told us. "It's not really an official piece of finished CIA intelligence."

Yet American scientists were astonished to learn during a visit to the Soviet Union earlier this year that the Soviets took the CIA report seriously. They ordered their own experts to investigate what is happening to the weather.

This came out during a bilateral Soviet-American discussion of environmental problems. One of the American scientists, Dr. Edward Epstein, kept careful notes. He summarized them last month in a memo to the Commerce Department.

"It appears that the CIA report on climate attracted a good bit of attention in the Soviet Union," reports Dr. Epstein's memo. "Upon reading the dire projections contained in the report, Soviet authorities asked what was happening climatologically ...

"It, therefore, appears that one result of the CIA study, undertaken in the first instance because the CIA felt the conventional agencies in the United States were not doing very much in studying and measuring climate fluctuations, ... (was to increase) the Soviet effort in this area while the U.S. effort remains essentially unchanged."

The Soviet weather study was directed primarily by Dr. M.I. Budyko, who is described in the CIA report itself as "an eminent Soviet climatological theoretician." Epstein conferred with Budyko in Russia and learned that the Soviet scientist is "firmly convinced that a rapid climatic warming is occuring."

His conclusion is that "drought conditions in the continental mid and high latitude will accompany the higher temperatures." This would mean dangerous droughts and crop failures in both America and Russia, as well as other food-producing nations.

Our associate Jim Grady questioned Epstein about his own views. "There has been disagreement on what's happening," he said, "let alone what will happen."

Many climate experts, including Budyko and Epstein, believe the increase in carbon dioxide in the earth's atmosphere is causing a change in climate. This increase can be attributed to man's growing use of fossil fuels.

Burning fossil fuels creates carbon dioxide, which acts as global insulation. This creates a greenhouse effect, warming the earth and causing drought conditions.

Belated Shakeups: It has taken 18 months, but the embattled Drug Enforcement Administration is finally going through a shakeup.

We wrote a series of columns beginning January 16, 1975, about personnel and policy problems at the agency. Subsequently, the Senate Investigations Subcommittee also began probing the DEA.

For much of the time, DEA headquarters in downtown Washington took on the atmosphere of a wartime bunker. The top officials spent most of their time returning the salvos from the press and the Senate.

Former DEA chief John Bartels resigned under fire. His temporary successor, Henry Dogin, made an heroic effort to hold the agency together. But little in the way of permanent change was accomplished.

The new DEA boss, Peter Bensinger, has made a start at changing things. Bensinger has demonstrated his administrative competence within the sharply restricted guidelines of government hiring and firing regulations. Bensinger is also changing the agency. Here's what has happened over the past few months:

that have marred the anti-drug efforts. Customs and Immigration officials are now working at DEA headquarters and at the El Paso, Tex., office. This assures closer coordination of narcotics intelligence gathering.

— An interagency agreement has just been signed between the Internal Revenue Service and DEA. A confidential list of well over 300 names of suspected drug traffickers has been forwarded to the taxman for investigation. Since many of these top drug dealers have managed to keep themselves insulated from narcotics deals, DEA hopes they may be guilty of failure to pay taxes on their huge incomes.

— Vincent Promuto, the former Washington Redskins football star who once served as DEA's top public spokesman, has been fired. The Justice Department is investigating allegations that he may have submitted fraudulent vouchers.

— Nelson Coon, the agency's top management official, has been disciplined for alleged "bad judgement." His suspension without pay resulted from his misleading the General Accounting Office during its investigation of DEA's hiring practices.

— Eleven other senior officials have been transferred or reassigned, some of them to less important jobs.

— By confidential cable sent worldwide, Bensinger ordered strict adherence to new legal guidelines on DEA's role abroad. The law prohibits DEA agents from engaging in direct police actions in any foreign country.

The result? Bensinger expects a reduction in heroin availability on American streets early next year.

THE CRAFTMAN'S CREED

While we hear mostly about consumer protection as viewed by various government agencies, we believe the majority of working people find their satisfaction in doing a good job. The Craftsman's Creed written by Dr. Frank Crane spells this out and deserves another reading:

"I BELIEVE IN WORK: I believe in doing the kind of work that is of real use. I believe that one of the best tests of whether work is useful or not is that people are willing to pay money for it.

"I believe in work that is of value to people now living, that I am a part of this generation, that I should serve my contemporaries and cooperate with them, and that the best assurance that my work will be appreciated by posterity is that it is of practical worth now. I believe that I have a right to expect pay for my labor, my chief concern is to do my work well, as the joy of good work well done is the highest form of satisfaction.

"I believe that the most dependable kind of happiness is that which is a by-product of work; that no pay is worthwhile unless it refreshes and restores the power and disposition to work and that no rest is sweet unless it is earned by work. I believe no man can do good work unless he loves it. I believe no man can do good work unless he submits to training and practice. I believe that all work done in love, and following training and practice, will be beautiful. I believe that the perfectly useful is always beautiful--that whatever is beautiful is useful.

"I believe that no man lives unto himself nor can do his best work by himself; for he must learn of his masters, he must cooperate with his fellow Craftsmen and he must produce something that shall be valuable to the people.

"I believe in no class, party, nor privilege, but that every man should be judged by his work, and that he is entitled to inner character and his outward product. I believe that God is no idle King, seeking the adulation which kings crave, nor indulging in the petty pleasures of a monarch's vanity; but that He is the infinite Worker, expressing Himself in the creation and continuous upkeep of His universe and finding His job in the forthputting of His almighty energy.

"I believe that I imitate Him, and am worthy to be called a son of God, only as I also in my small corner, do my work and find joy in it. I believe that every human being was born to do some kind of good work, and that in doing it he finds his best excuse for living, and the most intelligent answer to the question, 'Why was I born?"

WE'RE BEING DUPED AGAIN

This newspaper has for years advocated campaign reform with emphasis on the need to control the amount of funds expended for the election of candidates.

We had believed that the 1974 Federal Campaign Reform Act was at least a partial step in the right direction by the Supreme Court recently struck down important provisions of the measure, opening the doors again for a return to the old practices.

The ruling gives the wealthy candidate a constitutional right to buy an election by spending unlimited amounts from his own pocket, while others must raise funds under the applicable contribution limits.

The court's decision also permits contributors to spend unlimited amounts on behalf of specific candidates as long as they do not coordinate such expenditures with the candidates' own campaign committees.

The Supreme Court's rejection of limitations on expenditures by candidates and independent individuals and groups has magnified the inequities that exist under the law between classes of candidates. On the one hand, wealthy candidates or candidates having the support of well-organized, well-financed political action groups, such as the AFL-CIO's Committee on Political Education, can now spend unlimited sums in the promotion of their candidates.

On the other hand, candidates without private means or without support of such groups are limited to contributions that may not exceed $1,000 from individuals or $5,000 from political action committees. In practice, this has provided enormous handicaps in raising the kind of seed money that is especially important in launching the campaign of a candidate who is relatively unknown.

It is apparent that we need corrective legislation. There is a rush on now in Congress to do something about these problems but it would be folly to accept a proposal that would do even more harm to the election process.

Thus, we find reason to oppose the so-called "campaign reform" bill, known as HR 12015 now moving through Congress. Even though the present law is weighted in big labor's favor, the measure now up for passage would give the labor bosses almost virtual control of American politics. We mustn't let this happen.

Columnist Victor Riesel estimates that big labor spent more than $50 million in 1968 in its unsuccessful effort to elect Hubert Humphrey--and the actual total probably was as much as $90 million due to the union loophole as "in kind" contributions. Very little of that campaign spending ever was reported.

HR 12015 would only serve to enlarge such loopholes and should be defeated. If it does pass the Congress a presidential veto is in order. The American people deserve real campaign reform and not a flim-flam effort that provides more loopholes for the big labor bosses.

FEDERAL SPENDING SPREE

According to a world economic service, it is small wonder than an economic recovery is underway in the U.S. The government is throwing money around and letting if tall where it may. The budget deficit for the current year will be a record $75 billion. In the 200-year history of the U.S., budget deficits never even came close to that figure. Next year calls for more of the same. In the three fiscal years, 1975, 1976, and 1977 the total federal deficit will be greater than the cumulative deficit of the past 25 years.

It's always fun to go on a spending spree, but the enjoyment is soon forgotten when the bills come due. We guess every family has gone through that experience at least once. But the government pays no heed to lessons learned, even in the most recent past. Heavy budget deficits in the early 1970's led to the worst inflation in modern times. It took the deepest recession since the 1930's to bring inflation down to its present unsatisfactory high rate. The current string of budget deficits will inflict a severe burden on consumers and financial markets in the future years.

There are already signs of a rekindling of inflation. However, it will probably be several months before this is viewed as a serious problem again. Wholesale prices have been edging up. Labor settlements have been way out of line compared to current inflation levels. If the recovery picks up steam, it is highly probable that there will be an increase in industrial and commodity prices. After all, if corporations were able to boost prices in the midst of the most severe recession in 40 years, what is going to restrain them when demand picks up and capacity gets tight?

There may well be that worldwide forces will lead to a serious new round of inflation in 1977 and beyond. The European economy has been much slower in recovering from the recession than the United States. But there has already been a smart pickup in business in Germany, and France and other key countries are now beginning to snap out of it. As the United States recovery gains momentum, U.S. imports from Europe, and other countries producing raw materials, will rise. This in turn will stimulate demand in these countries and help feed the recovery already underway. So you can see that if the business recovery maintains its present pace, we will be right back on inflation's doorstep before too many months have passed.

The question that candidates for Congress and the Presidency would rather not hear at this time:

"Then what?"

"IT WASN'T YOUR FAULT, DEAR"

When wives run foul of traffic laws,
The men are loud in their guffaws;
But turn the tables—some man's blamed,
And then, by golly, he's been framed;
And though the wives may feel some glee,
They wisely hand out sympathy.

As a freshman from the North attending a college in the heart of Dixie, my friend decided that the best way to get along in the South was to develop the accent of the region. His first attempt, after a little practice, was to ask the local post-office clerk, in a simulated Southern drawl, for some ten-cent stamps. Receiving the stamps, he folded them and placed them in his wallet, which he slipped into his hip pocket.

Observing this, the clerk said in a genuine Southern drawl, "Up nawth you'all may be able to do that, but down heah they'll stick togethah."

IN PRAISE OF VIOLENCE

WASHINGTON— The National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting has issued a survey of violence on TV. The committee, headed by Nicholas Johnson, the former FCC Commissioner, monitored television for six weeks and came to the conclusion the most violent shows they saw were S.W.A.T., The Rookies, Sara, The ABC Sunday Movie, The CBS Friday Movie, The Rockford Files, Starsky and Hutch, McMillian-Columbo, NBC Saturday Night Movie and Joe Forrester. How they missed Kojak, Hawaii Five-O and The Streets of San Francisco I'll never know.

But they came up with another interesting bit of research. Using the definition of TV violence modeled on a system devised by Dr. George Gerbner of the University of Pennsylvania they discovered the most frequent sponsors of this type of show were Colgate-Palmolive products, Gillette hair products, Breck shampoo, Ford Motor Co., Johnson and Johnson, American Motors and Lysol.

It seems to me that those of us who enjoy violence on television should thank the people who make it all possible.

Too often we sit back in our chairs after seeing a girl raped or a policeman shot down in cold blood on TV and fail to say I think I'll write the sponsor of that show a letter and tell him how much it pleased me. After all sponsors people, and when they bring us blood and gore they want to know how much the audience appreciated it.

Since I know you're all busy people I have typed up some form letters that you can clip ut and send to a few of the companies who make all these violence-prone shows possible.

"President, Colgate-Palmolive:

"Dear Sir,

"I just wanted to tell you how much our entire family enjoyed the program you sponsored the other night where the man was buried in sand and the villian poured honey on his head so the ants would eat him. We also enjoyed the film the other night which showed this psychopathic killer who got his jollies from blowing up people's cars. My son Fred duplicated the bomb the killer made with stuff he found in our kitchen. Not only are the shows you sponsor exciting but they are also educational, and we assure you as long as you stick with violence we'll stick with Colgate toothpaste."

"Chairman of the Board, Gillette hair products:

"Dear Sir,

"You probably don't hear from too many satisfied viewers, but I want you to know that every time we see a Gillette commercial interspersed in a program where someone is kidnaped, mugged or killed, we make a mental note to buy your product. I realize you don't make these shows yourselves, but the fact that you have the good taste to advertise on them is enough for us. Keep up the good work."

"President, Breck shampoo:

"Dear Sir,

"I saw a movie Sunday night on ABC where 14 cowboys were killed in four minutes. There was blood all over the place and it was a real turn-on. I asked my wife how ABC could afford to pay for that kind of entertainment and she said, 'Don't thank ABC, thank Breck. They paid for it.' So that's what we're doing. Stay with violence. If you change to comedy we'll stop using your shampoo."

"Henry Ford, Detroit:

"Dear Mr. Ford,

"I see your name in the papers a lot, but I never thought I'd be writing to you. I just saw the scariest show on television. A madman was holding 13 people hostage and he kept killing them one at a time with a knife. You probably weren't even aware of it, but Ford was one of the sponsors. I want you to know how proud I am that you would have your product associated with this kind of program. It shows you're not intimidated by the small segment of the population who think violence on TV is bad for our children. I say stick to your guns. Kids don't buy cars anyway."

(You can write the above letter to American Motors as well.)

"President, Johnson & Johnson:

Dear Sir,

"I liked the show the other night you sponsored where a crooked cop crashed his car into a camper and killed the entire family. Then he made it look like a petty thief was the hit-and-run driver. It was a corker full of action and must have sold a warehouse of Johnson & Johnson baby powder. Looking forward to what you're sponsoring next week. I hope it has a guy slugging a woman around. I guess I enjoy that kind of violence more than anything."

These are only a few samples, but I'm certain the heads of companies who buy time on violent TV shows are anxious to hear from you. It makes them feel all the money and time they have invested has really paid off.

Inside Labor

By Victor Riesel

Who are the real Rip-Offs? -- A national Labor Chief's opinioin

Victor Riesel's guest columnist today is the militant leader of some 800,000 public employes, members of the fastest growing national union in the state-municipal sector. He was the sole AFL-CIO leader to speak at the Democratic National Convention.

By JERRY WURF
President of American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, AFL-CIO

WASHINGTON, D. C. — When my old friend Victor Riesel asks me to do a guest column, I think back to the days when he was earning his reputation as a courageous labor reporter and I was cutting my teeth as a labor organizer.

In those days, the leading press critic in New York City was a man named A. J. Leibling. If there were a way to force every journalist in the land (including Victor Riesel) to re-read Leibling, I'd be all for it.

"There is no concept more generally cherished by publishers than that of the Undeserving Poor," Leibling wrote in 1947. Then -- as now -- the newspapers were filled with reports of welfare mothers living off the fat of the land on the taxpayers' money. But, as Leibling noted, if there is one myth more cherished than the "undeserving poor," it is the "deserving rich." Stories about a wealthy individual or a giant corporation bilking the public appear on page 78 of the Sunday paper.

I love newspapers, but I'm scared to death of what might happen if people actually believed them. Over the last few years, the "undeserving poor" have kept making their appearances in the media (including Victor Riesel's column). They've been joined by "the overpaid worker" -- especially the pampered public employe who's living it up on less than $10,000 a year, while his older brother retires in luxury on Social Security and a $3,000 pension.

Who's really ripping off the taxpayer? Is it the recipient of social services -- and that's all of us, but especially the unemployed, the impoverished, the handicapped, the elderly, the ailing and the very young? Is it the worker who provides public services, such as cleaning the streets, inspecting milk and meat, purifying the water supply, providing health care and expediting unemployment benefits? Or are the real culprits some more fortunate people and businesses who don't appear as often in the headlines and on the 6 o'clock news?

Health care costs, for example, are rising at an astronomical rate -- higher than other items in the cost of living. Medical services soak up at least 7 per cent of the nation's wealth, even though America lacks the comprehensive system of health care found in Great Britain, West Germany, Sweden and other advanced industrtial democracies.

When the problem of skyrocketing health care costs has been discussed in the press, the emphasis has been on increasing demand by recipients of Medicare, Medicaid and other services. Or hospital spokesmen have been quoted on the increases in health care workers' earnings from the unconscionably low levels of the past to the modest but adequate levels that unions have negotiated in some major cities.

"Follow the money" was the watchword for Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward when they tracked down the men behind Watergate. This rule would be a worthy guideline for journalists searching for the real culprits behind skyrocketing health care costs. The money trail leads first to high-paid professionals, like practicing physicians, whose average income approaches $50,000, and clinical Pathologists, who earn a staggering $200,000 a year. It leads to overpaid hospital administrators, overbedded hospitals, and the insurance and pharmaceutical companies, which are earning record profits.

With the $32.4-billion-a-year Medicare program, the litany of waste, abuse, mistreatment and even outright theft would fill several volumes. According to U.S. News and World Report, corrupt practices may cost as much as $1 in every $10 spent on a program whose original -- and worthy -- purpose was to aid indigent and elderly patients. Grand juries in New York, Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Ohio and other states are investigating abuses such as bill padding, kickbacks and unnecessary treatment.

Corrupt doctors, pharmacists, laboratories and health care facilities are responsible for these abuses, as even the conservative U.S. News and World Report acknowledges. After all, they're in a better position than elderly patients or $8,000-a-year hospital workers to pad bills, kick back laboratory fees and embezzle Medicare reimbursements.

The costliest abuses of all occur in private nursing homes, many of which receive public funds to care for patients discharged from local hospitals. A U.S. Senate subcommittee has concluded that there are no standards of decency in the industry despite -- or more likely because of -- the $7.5 billion in Medicare and Medicaid funds that pour into the coffers of nursing home operators each year.

In New York state, the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare has moved to deny Medicare funds to 69 nursing homes that violate minimal standards. Nursing home magnate Bernard Bergman has been charged with substandard care, excessive payments for supplies, nepotistic hiring practices and fraudulent ownership changes in his facilities.

The gruesome spectacle of profiteers speculating on human misery should convince America that health care is too important to be entrusted to unregulated private businesses. But the same pattern of substandard services and excessive charges prevails in other public services -- from child care to street cleaning -- that have been farmed out to profitmaking companies. In social programs entrusted to private businesses or administered by public agencies without the proper accountability, high-paid professionals and outside companies have ripped off the taxpayers' money.

This story is well worth reporting -- and it has not received the coverage it deserves. It is part of the case for reforming social services -- for building in good management, cost controls and public accountability. But rip-offs by the privileged are no reason to deny services to the needy or decency to the men and women who provide these services.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Climate Changes Concern Soviets

by Jack Anderson
with Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has been spurred by a U.S. intelligence report to launch an urgent study of global climate changes.

The Central Intelligence Agency warned in a 1974 report of the possibility of "a detrimental global climatic change." Pointing out that "the stability of most nations is based on a dependable source of food," the report declares tersely: "This stability will not be possible under the new climatic era."

The CIA quoted even more alarming language from a University of Wisconsin forecast that "the earth's climate is returning to ... an era of drought, famine and political unrest in the western world."

A CIA spokesman tried to downplay the doomsday report. "It's really a view of one author," he told us. "It's not really an official piece of finished CIA intelligence."

Yet American scientists were astonished to learn during a visit to the Soviet Union earlier this year that the Soviets took the CIA report seriously. They ordered their own experts to investigate what is happening to the weather.

This came out during a bilateral Soviet-American discussion of environmental problems. One of the American scientists, Dr. Edward Epstein, kept careful notes. He summarized them last month in a memo to the Commerce Department.

"It appears that the CIA report on climate attracted a good bit of attention in the Soviet Union," reports Dr. Epstein's memo. "Upon reading the dire projections contained in the report, Soviet authorities asked what was happening climatologically ...

"It, therefore, appears that one result of the CIA study, undertaken in the first instance because the CIA felt the conventional agencies in the United States were not doing very much in studying and measuring climate fluctuations, ... (was to increase) the Soviet effort in this area while the U.S. effort remains essentially unchanged."

The Soviet weather study was directed primarily by Dr. M.I. Budyko, who is described in the CIA report itself as "an eminent Soviet climatological theoretician." Epstein conferred with Budyko in Russia and learned that the Soviet scientist is "firmly convinced that a rapid climatic warming is occuring."

His conclusion is that "drought conditions in the continental mid and high latitude will accompany the higher temperatures." This would mean dangerous droughts and crop failures in both America and Russia, as well as other food-producing nations.

Our associate Jim Grady questioned Epstein about his own views. "There has been disagreement on what's happening," he said, "let alone what will happen."

Many climate experts, including Budyko and Epstein, believe the increase in carbon dioxide in the earth's atmosphere is causing a change in climate. This increase can be attributed to man's growing use of fossil fuels.

Burning fossil fuels creates carbon dioxide, which acts as global insulation. This creates a greenhouse effect, warming the earth and causing drought conditions.

Belated Shakeups: It has taken 18 months, but the embattled Drug Enforcement Administration is finally going through a shakeup.

We wrote a series of columns beginning January 16, 1975, about personnel and policy problems at the agency. Subsequently, the Senate Investigations Subcommittee also began probing the DEA.

For much of the time, DEA headquarters in downtown Washington took on the atmosphere of a wartime bunker. The top officials spent most of their time returning the salvos from the press and the Senate.

Former DEA chief John Bartels resigned under fire. His temporary successor, Henry Dogin, made an heroic effort to hold the agency together. But little in the way of permanent change was accomplished.

The new DEA boss, Peter Bensinger, has made a start at changing things. Bensinger has demonstrated his administrative competence within the sharply restricted guidelines of government hiring and firing regulations. Bensinger is also changing the agency. Here's what has happened over the past few months:

that have marred the anti-drug efforts. Customs and Immigration officials are now working at DEA headquarters and at the El Paso, Tex., office. This assures closer coordination of narcotics intelligence gathering.

— An interagency agreement has just been signed between the Internal Revenue Service and DEA. A confidential list of well over 300 names of suspected drug traffickers has been forwarded to the taxman for investigation. Since many of these top drug dealers have managed to keep themselves insulated from narcotics deals, DEA hopes they may be guilty of failure to pay taxes on their huge incomes.

— Vincent Promuto, the former Washington Redskins football star who once served as DEA's top public spokesman, has been fired. The Justice Department is investigating allegations that he may have submitted fraudulent vouchers.

— Nelson Coon, the agency's top management official, has been disciplined for alleged "bad judgement." His suspension without pay resulted from his misleading the General Accounting Office during its investigation of DEA's hiring practices.

— Eleven other senior officials have been transferred or reassigned, some of them to less important jobs.

— By confidential cable sent worldwide, Bensinger ordered strict adherence to new legal guidelines on DEA's role abroad. The law prohibits DEA agents from engaging in direct police actions in any foreign country.

The result? Bensinger expects a reduction in heroin availability on American streets early next year.

Agronomist lists 'lay-by' herbicides

By THOMAS A. BROWN JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — The use of a "lay-by" application of herbicides for late season weed control in cotton fields will probably be a paying proposition in many cases this season. A heavy weed infestation can reduce cotton yields, increase harvest losses, and result in the cotton being reduced in grade which can amount to a sizeable reduction in profits. The "lay-by" chemical treatment will do much to reduce such losses under certain conditions.

Much of the cotton in this area is smaller than usual at present, and skippy cotton stands are found in a number of fields. In such cases where cotton will not shade the row and middles soon after lay-by time, the lay-by chemical applications will usually pay good dividends. In addition, profitable returns can usually be expected in cases of heavy rainfall, in fields where irrigation is practiced, or where weeds are usually a problem. It should be emphasized that late weed infestations cannot always be predicted at lay-by time.

Herbicides recommended for "lay-by" applications are Diuron (Karmex), Flometuron (Cotoran) and Linuron (Lorox) and all will give fair to good control of most common weeds and grasses. These herbicides are recommended as a broadcast, directed spray.

Diuron is recommended for use at rates ranging from one-half to one pound of active ingredient per acre on sandy loam soils to one to 1.5 pounds per acre on heavy clay soils. Cover the middles completely while directing the spray away from the cotton. Irrigate, if possible, to activate the chemical if rain does not fall within 10 days following treatment.

Flometuron is recommended at the rate of one to two pounds of active ingredient per acre, depending upon the expected severeity of the weed infestation and soil type. Use the higher rate on the heavier soils. Apply in the same manner recommended for Diuron.

Linuron will do a better job on taller weeds than Diuron. Recommendations call for the application of one-half to three-fourths pound of active ingredient per acre after cotton plants are 15 inches tall. Apply in the same manner suggested for Diuron and Flometuron. This treatment may be repeated after seven days if needed.

Either herbicide should be applied to a weed-free soil following the last normal cultivation. If small weeds are present, a surfactant should be added at the rate of one quart per 100 gallons of spray solution.

The cost of application may be reduced by applying the herbicide in the process of making the last cultivation.

Cotton seal scores high

In 1973, Cotton Inc. introduced to the American public its new seal which after two full years of use is recognized by almost one-fourth of all adults. Independent tests have since shown that the cotton seal is serving its purpose of increasing public awareness of U.S. cotton products.

Seal increases public awareness

NEW YORK — After two full years of use, the new cotton seal of U.S. cotton growers is recognized by almost one-fourth of all adult Americans.

The impact on the consumer marketplace of the cotton seal, which was introduced by Cotton Incorporated in 1973, has been measured in a number of studies by various consumer research firms.

Cotton Incorporated is the fiber company of U.S. cotton producers, with marketing headquarters here, a research center in Raleigh, N.C., and sales offices in Dallas and Los Angeles.

One series of studies for Cotton Incorporated was conducted by the Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J. The first test, conducted in late 1973, served as a benchmark by which tests in 1974 and 1975 measured increasing public awareness of the cotton seal.

"Proven awareness of the cotton seal jumped ahead by another 28 per cent in 1975," says J. Dukes Wooters Jr., Cotton Incorporated president. "The cotton seal was the only textile-related symbol used in the test that showed any gain during the past year."

The independent studies also show that the cotton seal influences public attitudes about cotton products.

For example, among consumers who are aware of the cotton seal, 82 per cent described cotton as "comfortable on the skin." But among consumers not aware of the cotton seal, 67 per cent rated cotton as "comfortable on the skin."

Another consumer study, conducted by Perception Research Services of Englewood Cliffs, N.J., showed the same results.

In this test, consumers in different groups were asked to describe men's underwear in packages adorned by the cotton seal and in packages which did not show the seal.

The underwear in the package containing the cotton seal was described as "comfortable to wear" by 82 per cent of the consumers tested. The package without the cotton seal was described the same way by 68 per cent of the tested consumers.

The results of Perception Research Services tests were even more dramatic when consumers who participated in the study were offered a gift in the form of a package of men's underwear.

A large display containing packages with the cotton seal and packages without the seal was set up to represent a retail sales situation. Each test panelist was allowed to select the package of underwear he preferred.

Packages with the cotton seal on it were chosen by 69 per cent of the test panelists. Packages without the cotton seal were chosen by only 31 per cent.

"These independent tests show that the cotton seal is serving its purpose of increasing the public awareness of U.S. cotton products," says Wooters. "In addition, it is adding to consumer acceptance of cotton products."

Roof to serve 6-counties

Entomologist is appointed to area

PORTAGEVILLE — Dr. Mitchell Roof, a member of the entomology department at North Carolina State University, has been appointed by the University of Missouri to be entomology specialist for the six-county Bootheel extension area, Glenn Patton of Portageville, area director, announced today.

Dr. Roof will be working with Ed Kowalski, another area entomologist appointed earlier. Patton said Kowalski will specialize in cotton entomology while Dr. Roof will be responsible for certain other crops.

The new specialist is a graduate of Kansas State College at Pittsburg where he received bachelor and master's degrees in biology in 1968 and 1970, respectively. He worked as a research assistant in the entomology department at Kansas State University in Manhattar from 1970 until 1974, the year he received his Ph.D. degree in entomology.

Dr. Roof has been a research associate at North Carolina State for the past two years. He also is a member of the Entomological Society of America.

Following an orientation period, Dr. Roof will be headquartered at the Delta Center the first of August.

Kowalski will also be stationed at the Delta Center in Portageville. The present entomology specialist, Flernoy Jones, has transferred to the Columbia campus.

Kowalski is a 1974 graduate of University of Arkansas Fayetteville with a B.S. degree in general agriculture. He received his M.S. degree in entomology from the University of Arkansas Fayetteville campus this year where he worked as a graduate assistant in the entomology department.

Kowalski is a member of the Entomological Society of America. Besides serving the six-county area of the Bootheel, he also will be responsible for entomology programs in adjoining Butler County, part of the Ozark Foothills area.

An orientation period for Kowalski has been completed and he is now headquartered at the Delta Center.

UM Extension provides services to local farmers in several phases of agriculture, plus programs in home economics, community development, youth development and continuing education.

USDA seeks comments on proposals for wheat, feed, grain, soybean program

BENTON — United States Department of Agriculture is asking for comments on its proposed determinations for the 1977 wheat, feed grain, and soybean programs.

The secretary of agriculture proposes to make determinations and issue regulations relative to:

--The size of the national acreage allotment for feed grains. (In April, USDA announced a 1977 wheat allotment of 62.2 million, up from 61.6 million acres for 1976.)

--Whether there should be a set-aside requirement for wheat and feed grains for the crop, and if so, the extent of such requirement.

--Whether there should be provisions for additional diversions and, if so, the extent of such diversions and the payment rate.

--Loan and purchase rates for wheat and feed grains for the 1977 crop, including commodity eligibility and storage requirements.

--Whether there should be a loan and purchase program for 1977 crop soybeans, and, if so, the loan and purchase level.

--Other related provisions necessary to carry out the loan and purchase program and the set aside program.

Prior to making determinations, consideration will be given to any written comments received by the Director, Grains, Oilseeds, and Cotton Division, ASCS, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, not later than Aug. 30.

All written submissions will be made for public inspection at the office of the Director, Room 3741, Agriculture Department's South Building, during regular business hours

Soybean loan rates are announced for '76

BENTON — The United States Department of Agriculture has issued county loan and purchase rates for the 1976 soybean crop. The loan rates, which vary from county to county, are based on the national average loan rate of $2.50 per bushel. The $2.50 figure is an increase of 25 cents from the 1974 level. There was no soybean loan program in 1975.

Adjustments are made in county loan rates to reflect prices received by farmers and for shifts in production.

In the following states, loan rates have been increased between 22 and 23 cents per bushel: Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, and Ohio.

The announced loan rates are for soybeans of the classes "yellow" or "green" containing 12.8 to 13.0 per cent moisture, grading not lower than Number 2 on factors of test weight, splits and heat damage, and not lower than no. 1 on all other factors.

Copies of the 1976-crop soybean county loan rates are being sent to state ASCS offices. They will also be available from the Grain, Oilseeds and Cotton Division, ASCS, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

PORTAGEVILLE — Cotton continued to make progress last week. Most fields were fruiting well. Growers were irrigating in some of the dry areas. Spider mites were still the major insect problem last week. However, plant bugs were starting to show a very small increase from the week before as reported by cotton insect scouts and Area Entomologists.

It is still a guess as to how much cotton acreage that we have left. However, it is getting down close to the 200,000 acre mark as we still had some cotton destroyed last week where the crop had very little chance of maturing. This land is being prepared for a wheat crop this fall.

Speaking of wheat, growers are already making inquiries about varieties and arranging for planting seed.

Variety trial results are now available or will be shortly at county extension centers in the Bootheel.

Although I am reporting yield data for 1976 tests at our two locations, variety selection should be based on results of more than one year of testing. Diseases and bird damage were more prevalent at the Portageville location than at the Dexter test.

Disease resistance and other characteristics are reported in the variety publication that you can obtain.

Seed of some of the new varieties may not be available this fall.

Don't get in too big of a hurry to plant this fall. The early planting suffered more from diseases and hessian fly damage last season than the later plantings. However, most of our wheat will be planted following soybeans which is about the right seeding time. The early plantings are usually made following corn or sorghum.

Seed treatments will be necessary on most of the wheat seed to be planted this fall. For example loose smut resistance broke down in some varieties last season. A Vitavax seed treatment will help control loose smut. Other seed treatments can be obtained from Extension Plant Pathologist or Area Agronomists.

Midge infestation is discussed at grain sorghum insect meeting

BLOOMFIELD — In spite of rainy weather, 45 people participated in two grain sorghum insect meetings held in Dexter and Painton July 29.

How to find and identify sorghum midge, how to determine when a field should be treated for the control of this pest, and recommended midge control recommendations were demonstrated and discussed by Edward Kowalski and Mitchell Roof, Extension Area Entomology Specialists from the University of Missouri Delta Center at Portageville.

Special attention was devoted to midge, since grain sorghum is blooming and is therefore subject to midge infestations in many cases at present. Other grain sorghum insect pests that farmers need to be aware of including sorghum webworm, corn earworm, and aphids were also discussed in detail. Insect exhibits including midge and webworms were on display to help farmers identify these pests.

Special problems pertaining to grain sorghum including marketing, weed control and stands were discussed by Tom Brown, of Bloomfield, Area Agronomy Specialist. He stated that with the rapid increasing grain sorghum acreage, marketing is becoming a serious problem. He warned farmers that sorghum marketing problems were common last year "during one of the most ideal harvest seasons I have ever seen." He emphasized the need for more on-the-farm drying and storage facilities. He informed those present that E.B. Nace, area agricultural engineering specialist at the Delta Center, is available to help them plan drying and storage systems.

Due to the rain, planned field portions of the meeting had to be canceled and the meeting held under shelter. The Dexter meeting was held under the pavillion at the East City Park. The Painton meeting was conducted in the Painton shop.

Henry Was No Ford

Today's cotton industry would be quite different if two devices patented by a Mobile, Ala., cotton broker and merchant had proved successful.

In 1855, George G. Henry designed a machine with which he hoped both to pick and spin cotton into yarn on Southern farms. The device attracted much attention, reports the National Cotton Council, but Henry was unable to build a workable machine.

Two years later, he patented and offered for sale a combination gin and spinning machine which he called a "mechanical marvel."

It won a silver medal at American Institute's annual fair in New York in 1857, but the Civil War prevented much use of the machine. Little interest was shown in Henry's device after the war, as Southerners began textile mill development.

Colonists Reprimanded

Georgia colonists who grew, manufactured, and sold some cotton in the first half of the 18th Century were reprimanded by the English government and advised to turn their attention to producing silk. The British discouraged any manufacturing in the colonies which might interfere with that in the Mother Country.

Cottonseed Oil Made Debut In Philadelphia

First cottonseed oil made in the United States was presented by a Dr. Otto of Bethlehem, Pa., to the American Philosophical Association in Philadelphia in 1768.

The association was the earliest organization formed in the U.S. to promote scientific agriculture, reports the National Cotton Council.

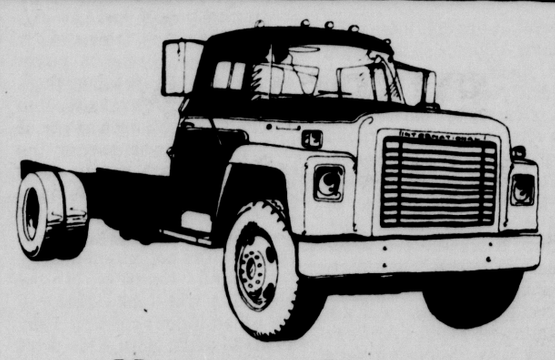

Samples of oil submitted by Otto included nine pints obtained from 1½ bushels of cottonseed.

It was almost a century later, however, before cottonseed oil was being successfully produced on a large-scale commercial basis.

Cotton seal scores high

In 1973, Cotton Inc. introduced to the American public its new seal which after two full years of use is recognized by almost one-fourth of all adults. Independent tests have since shown that the cotton seal is serving its purpose of increasing public awareness of U.S. cotton products.

Seal increases public awareness

NEW YORK — After two full years of use, the new cotton seal of U.S. cotton growers is recognized by almost one-fourth of all adult Americans.

The impact on the consumer marketplace of the cotton seal, which was introduced by Cotton Incorporated in 1973, has been measured in a number of studies by various consumer research firms.

Cotton Incorporated is the fiber company of U.S. cotton producers, with marketing headquarters here, a research center in Raleigh, N.C., and sales offices in Dallas and Los Angeles.

One series of studies for Cotton Incorporated was conducted by the Opinion Research Corp. of Princeton, N.J. The first test, conducted in late 1973, served as a benchmark by which tests in 1974 and 1975 measured increasing public awareness of the cotton seal.

"Proven awareness of the cotton seal jumped ahead by another 28 per cent in 1975," says J. Dukes Wooters Jr., Cotton Incorporated president. "The cotton seal was the only textile-related symbol used in the test that showed any gain during the past year."

The independent studies also show that the cotton seal influences public attitudes about cotton products.

For example, among consumers who are aware of the cotton seal, 82 per cent described cotton as "comfortable on the skin." But among consumers not aware of the cotton seal, 67 per cent rated cotton as "comfortable on the skin."

Another consumer study, conducted by Perception Research Services of Englewood Cliffs, N.J., showed the same results.

In this test, consumers in different groups were asked to describe men's underwear in packages adorned by the cotton seal and in packages which did not show the seal.

The underwear in the package containing the cotton seal was described as "comfortable to wear" by 82 per cent of the consumers tested. The package without the cotton seal was described the same way by 68 per cent of the tested consumers.

The results of Perception Research Services tests were even more dramatic when consumers who participated in the study were offered a gift in the form of a package of men's underwear.

A large display containing packages with the cotton seal and packages without the seal was set up to represent a retail sales situation. Each test panelist was allowed to select the package of underwear he preferred.

Packages with the cotton seal on it were chosen by 69 per cent of the test panelists. Packages without the cotton seal were chosen by only 31 per cent.

"These independent tests show that the cotton seal is serving its purpose of increasing the public awareness of U.S. cotton products," says Wooters. "In addition, it is adding to consumer acceptance of cotton products."

Soybean loan rates are announced for '76

BENTON — The United States Department of Agriculture has issued county loan and purchase rates for the 1976 soybean crop. The loan rates, which vary from county to county, are based on the national average loan rate of $2.50 per bushel. The $2.50 figure is an increase of 25 cents from the 1974 level. There was no soybean loan program in 1975.

Adjustments are made in county loan rates to reflect prices received by farmers and for shifts in production.

In the following states, loan rates have been increased between 22 and 23 cents per bushel: Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, and Ohio.

The announced loan rates are for soybeans of the classes "yellow" or "green" containing 12.8 to 13.0 per cent moisture, grading not lower than Number 2 on factors of test weight, splits and heat damage, and not lower than no. 1 on all other factors.

Copies of the 1976-crop soybean county loan rates are being sent to state ASCS offices. They will also be available from the Grain, Oilseeds and Cotton Division, ASCS, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

Agronomist lists 'lay-by' herbicides

By THOMAS A. BROWN JR.
Area Agronomy Specialist

BLOOMFIELD — The use of a "lay-by" application of herbicides for late season weed control in cotton fields will probably be a paying proposition in many cases this season. A heavy weed infestation can reduce cotton yields, increase harvest losses, and result in the cotton being reduced in grade which can amount to a sizeable reduction in profits. The "lay-by" chemical treatment will do much to reduce such losses under certain conditions.

Much of the cotton in this area is smaller than usual at present, and skippy cotton stands are found in a number of fields. In such cases where cotton will not shade the row and middles soon after lay-by time, the lay-by chemical applications will usually pay good dividends. In addition, profitable returns can usually be expected in cases of heavy rainfall, in fields where irrigation is practiced, or where weeds are usually a problem. It should be emphasized that late weed infestations cannot always be predicted at lay-by time.

Herbicides recommended for "lay-by" applications are Diuron (Karmex), Flometuron (Cotoran) and Linuron (Lorox) and all will give fair to good control of most common weeds and grasses. These herbicides are recommended as a broadcast, directed spray.

Diuron is recommended for use at rates ranging from one-half to one pound of active ingredient per acre on sandy loam soils to one to 1.5 pounds per acre on heavy clay soils. Cover the middles completely while directing the spray away from the cotton. Irrigate, if possible, to activate the chemical if rain does not fall within 10 days following treatment.

Flometuron is recommended at the rate of one to two pounds of active ingredient per acre, depending upon the expected severeity of the weed infestation and soil type. Use the higher rate on the heavier soils. Apply in the same manner recommended for Diuron.

Linuron will do a better job on taller weeds than Diuron. Recommendations call for the application of one-half to three-fourths pound of active ingredient per acre after cotton plants are 15 inches tall. Apply in the same manner suggested for Diuron and Flometuron. This treatment may be repeated after seven days if needed.

Either herbicide should be applied to a weed-free soil following the last normal cultivation. If small weeds are present, a surfactant should be added at the rate of one quart per 100 gallons of spray solution.

The cost of application may be reduced by applying the herbicide in the process of making the last cultivation.

Roof to serve 6-counties

Entomologist is appointed to area

PORTAGEVILLE — Dr. Mitchell Roof, a member of the entomology department at North Carolina State University, has been appointed by the University of Missouri to be entomology specialist for the six-county Bootheel extension area, Glenn Patton of Portageville, area director, announced today.

Dr. Roof will be working with Ed Kowalski, another area entomologist appointed earlier. Patton said Kowalski will specialize in cotton entomology while Dr. Roof will be responsible for certain other crops.

The new specialist is a graduate of Kansas State College at Pittsburg where he received bachelor and master's degrees in biology in 1968 and 1970, respectively. He worked as a research assistant in the entomology department at Kansas State University in Manhattar from 1970 until 1974, the year he received his Ph.D. degree in entomology.

Dr. Roof has been a research associate at North Carolina State for the past two years. He also is a member of the Entomological Society of America.

Following an orientation period, Dr. Roof will be headquartered at the Delta Center the first of August.

Kowalski will also be stationed at the Delta Center in Portageville. The present entomology specialist, Flernoy Jones, has transferred to the Columbia campus.

Kowalski is a 1974 graduate of University of Arkansas Fayetteville with a B.S. degree in general agriculture. He received his M.S. degree in entomology from the University of Arkansas Fayetteville campus this year where he worked as a graduate assistant in the entomology department.

Kowalski is a member of the Entomological Society of America. Besides serving the six-county area of the Bootheel, he also will be responsible for entomology programs in adjoining Butler County, part of the Ozark Foothills area.

An orientation period for Kowalski has been completed and he is now headquartered at the Delta Center.

USDA seeks comments on proposals for wheat, feed, grain, soybean program

BENTON — United States Department of Agriculture is asking for comments on its proposed determinations for the 1977 wheat, feed grain, and soybean programs.

The secretary of agriculture proposes to make determinations and issue regulations relative to:

--The size of the national acreage allotment for feed grains. (In April, USDA announced a 1977 wheat allotment of 62.2 million, up from 61.6 million acres for 1976.)

--Whether there should be a set-aside requirement for wheat and feed grains for the crop, and if so, the extent of such requirement.

--Whether there should be provisions for additional diversions and, if so, the extent of such diversions and the payment rate.

--Loan and purchase rates for wheat and feed grains for the 1977 crop, including commodity eligibility and storage requirements.

--Whether there should be a loan and purchase program for 1977 crop soybeans, and, if so, the loan and purchase level.

--Other related provisions necessary to carry out the loan and purchase program and the set aside program.

Prior to making determinations, consideration will be given to any written comments received by the Director, Grains, Oilseeds, and Cotton Division, ASCS, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250, not later than Aug. 30.

All written submissions will be made for public inspection at the Office of the Director, Room 3741, Agriculture Department's South Building, during regular business hours

Bootheel weather outlook is wet

By LEONARD F. HAND
Area agricultural meteorologist

PORTAGEVILLE— The average monthly weather outlook anticipates near normal temperature average and above median rainfall for the Missouri Bootheel during August. It would appear that sufficient interchange of cool and warm air will occur across the region to bring temperatures averages into the seasonal range without the monotony of prolonged heat and humidity.

These variations are likely to be brought about by fronts responsible for rain totals greater than the August norm. Considerable variation was noted in July thunderstorm rains, and we will look for similar patterns this month. The daily extended outlooks remain the best indicators of the frequency and duration of wetting periods.

Most sections of the Bootheel felt some period of water stress during July. The bulk of rainfall in the Portageville area was in the gage by the 4th of the month. Other sections with substantially greater totals were visited by heavy showers late in the month.

July rainfall reported by National Weather Service agricultural stations was: Malden, 2.23 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.40; Sikeston, 4.50; Charleston, 5.77; Portageville ,4.45; Kennett, 5.89; East Prairie, 8.77; and Caruthersville, 9.12 inches. These compare with a July normal of 3.11 inches.

The monthly average temperature at Portageville was 79.1 degrees, compared with a Bootheel Division normal of 79.7.

These figures alone offer no conclusive evidence to the fate of southeast Missouri crops. One estimate is that cotton is about two and a half weeks behind normal growth patterns, with much of that due to delay at planting and slow progress through emergence and seedling stages. But, with the crop out of phase with its usual cycle, matching effects of weather trends with normal response is rather impractical.

For example, the following table shows weekly average temperature and rainfall for the Portageville area, as well as potential consumptive use of water by several crops computed for Normal Bootheel temperature. These values assume that plant mass is consistent with usual development.

Crops lagging by a week or so would be demanding somewhat lesser amount of water. But, in any event, the average weekly rainfall indicated for August will fall short of need, and crops will draw upon sub-soil reserves. Where these are inadequate, it is either irrigation or stress.

The prospect for above normal rainfall in August comes at an appropriage time to offset the usual August slump in rainfall frequency and the scattered nature of mid-summer showers.

	Avg. Temp		Avg. Rain	Potential Water Use (inches)
Wk. Ending	Max	Min	(inches)	Cotton	Full Season Soybeans	Soybeans After Wheat
Aug. 8	92	66	0.48	1.95-2.15	0.93-1.62	0.68
15	92	66	0.98	1.73-2.14	1.05-1.72	0.78
22	88	66	0.80	1.53-1.95	1.16-1.73	0.88
29	88	64	0.58	1.32-1.78	1.23-1.61	1.00

In sections where rainfall has been adequate to excess so far, cotton farmers might prefer a dry outlook to prevent vegetative growth spurred by rains.

Soybeans, also behind in many sections by a week or two, are more likely to make good use of all the water it takes to prevent stressing. The nature of distribution of wetting during the month is not disclosed in the outlook. The daily extended outlooks will be best advance guidance to frequency, areal coverage and volume of rain.

Edward Kowalski, Bootheel area entomology specialist at the University of Missouri Delta Center, indicates that cool and wet periods may aggravate the bollworm problem, reducing effectiveness of natural controls by beneficial insects. He adds that plant bugs have remained in weeds that remain vigorous and were not moving into the crops by early August. This would be another factor to watch as the month unfolds.

Late grain sorghum, not yet mature, may be subject to heavy pressures from midge populations building up in older crops. Kowalski, or an area agronomy specialist, should be consulted should problems develop.

Normal August rainfall for the Bootheel as a whole is 3.11 inches. Normals for individual cities are:

Advance, 3.48; Caruthersville, 2.77; Dexter, 3.42; Morehouse, 3.27; Parma, 3.13; Sikeston, 3.04; Cape Girardeau, 3.77; Clearwater Dam, 3.14; Doniphan, 3.37; New WMadrid, 2.96; Poplar Bluff, 2.93; and Wappapello Dam, 3.39.

Long-term records show the following averages for August rainfall iln months with above normal totals: Sikeston, 5.72 inches; Poplar Bluff 6.03; and Caruthersville 5.69 inches. Ranges of rainfall totals for those conditions are: Sikeston, 3.73 to 12.71 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.67 to 14.58 inches; and Caruthersville, 3.80 to 10.79 inches.

Livestock producers are urged to let pastures rest

With top dressing costs running near $20 an acre, most livestock producers will have to manage their pasture systems better in order to keep production costs in line.

Of course, all pastures need an adequate fertility program, but fertilizer alone is not enough. Rest and reovery periods make grass more productive and it lives a lot longer.

Most pastures get caught in the squeeze when the top is always grazed down and the roots never develop to get the maximum use of the applied topdressing. It takes a big, healthy root system to provide vigorous top growth.

A good pasture takes several separately fenced areas. One with good grass already grown can be grazed while the others rest and recover. When grass in another area has grown up, the livestock are shifted to it to rest the first pasture.

These rest periods allow strong root systems to develop. Strong roots utilize natural and applied nutrients, thus a faster growing, more productive plant.

A poorly managed pasture may be unproductive due to killing out the stand, spot grazing, increased internal parasite infestation and excess trampling. A combination of these conditions leads to water loss and erosion.

Good, well-managed grass reduces water runoff and soil loss to a minimum, while utilizing available nutrients to the maximum.

Planning ahead is essential to get the maximum production from your fertilizer dollar.

USDA adopts policy to retain 'prime' land from non-ag uses

BENTON — The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) today announced a policy to help keep the nation's best farm, range, and forest lands from going into non-agricultural uses.

In announcing the policy, Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz said the loss of "prime" lands well-suited to the production of food, forage and timber is a matter of concern to the nation. Major consideration must be given to longterm needs to retain the productive capability of and environmental values of American agriculture and forestry, he said.

USDA will urge all federal agencies to adopt the policy that federal activities that take prime agricultural land should be carried out only when there are no suitable alternative sites and when the activity meets an overriding public need.

USDA also will work with private organizations and groups to urge the protection of prime lands from premature or unnecessary conversion to nonagricultural land use.

Land use alternatives are generally available that can minimize the impact on prime lands, the secretary said, and such alternatives should be explored carefully, particularly where federal funds are involved and when prime lands will be irrevocably commited to nonagricultural uses.

Other guidelines for protecting prime lands call for (1) environmental impact statements and review procedures, (2) inventories and evaluations of the nation's farms, range and forest lands and (3) cooperative efforts with states, local governments and universities to insure concerns for food, fiber, and wood production are recognized and emphasized in identifying prime agricultural lands.

The prime lands policy also proposes review of all USDA programs to insure that they are consistent with the policy.

Bootheel weather outlook is wet

By LEONARD F. HAND
Area agricultural meteorologist

PORTAGEVILLE— The average monthly weather outlook anticipates near normal temperature average and above median rainfall for the Missouri Bootheel during August. It would appear that sufficient interchange of cool and warm air will occur across the region to bring temperatures averages into the seasonal range without the monotony of prolonged heat and humidity.

These variations are likely to be brought about by fronts responsible for rain totals greater than the August norm. Considerable variation was noted in July thunderstorm rains, and we will look for similar patterns this month. The daily extended outlooks remain the best indicators of the frequency and duration of wetting periods.

Most sections of the Bootheel felt some period of water stress during July. The bulk of rainfall in the Portageville area was in the gage by the 4th of the month. Other sections with substantially greater totals were visited by heavy showers late in the month.

July rainfall reported by National Weather Service agricultural stations was: Malden, 2.23 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.40; Sikeston, 4.50; Charleston, 5.77; Portageville ,4.45; Kennett, 5.89; East Prairie, 8.77; and Caruthersville, 9.12 inches. These compare with a July normal of 3.11 inches.

The monthly average temperature at Portageville was 79.1 degrees, compared with a Bootheel Division normal of 79.7.

These figures alone offer no conclusive evidence to the fate of southeast Missouri crops. One estimate is that cotton is about two and a half weeks behind normal growth patterns, with much of that due to delay at planting and slow progress through emergence and seedling stages. But, with the crop out of phase with its usual cycle, matching effects of weather trends with normal response is rather impractical.

For example, the following table shows weekly average temperature and rainfall for the Portageville area, as well as potential consumptive use of water by several crops computed for Normal Bootheel temperature. These values assume that plant mass is consistent with usual development.

Crops lagging by a week or so would be demanding somewhat lesser amount of water. But, in any event, the average weekly rainfall indicated for August will fall short of need, and crops will draw upon sub-soil reserves. Where these are inadequate, it is either irrigation or stress.

The prospect for above normal rainfall in August comes at an appropriage time to offset the usual August slump in rainfall frequency and the scattered nature of mid-summer showers.

		Avg. Temp		Avg. Rain	Potential Water Use (inches)
Wk. Ending		Max	Min	(inches)	Cotton	Full Season Soybeans		Soybeans After Wheat
Aug.	8	92	68	3.48	1.95-2.15	0.93	1.62	0.68
	15	92	68	0.98	1.73-2.14	1.05	1.72	0.78
	22	88	66	0.80	1.53-1.95	1.16	1.73	0.88
	29	88	64	0.58	1.32-1.73	1.23	1.61	1.00

In sections where rainfall has been adequate to excess so far, cotton farmers might prefer a dry outlook to prevent vegetative growth spurred by rains.

Soybeans, also behind in many sections by a week or two, are more likely to make good use of all the water it takes to prevent stressing. The nature of distribution of wetting during the month is not disclosed in the outlook. The daily extended outlooks will be best advance guidance to frequency, areal coverage and volume of rain.

Edward Kowalski, Bootheel area entomology specialist at the University of Missouri Delta Center, indicates that cool and wet periods may aggravate the bollworm problem, reducing effectiveness of natural controls by beneficial insects. He adds that plant bugs have remained in weeds that remain vigorous and were not moving into the crops by early August. This would be another factor to watch as the month unfolds.

Late grain sorghum, not yet mature, may be subject to heavy pressures from midge populations building up in older crops. Kowalski, or an area agronomy specialist, should be consulted should problems develop.

Normal August rainfall for the Bootheel as a whole is 3.11 inches. Normals for individual cities are:

Advance, 3.48; Caruthersville, 2.77; Dexter, 3.42; Morehouse, 3.27; Parma, 3.13; Sikeston, 3.04; Cape Girardeau, 3.77; Clearwater Dam, 3.14; Doniphan, 3.37; New WMadrid, 2.96; Poplar Bluff, 2.93; and Wappapello Dam, 3.39.

Long-term records show the following averages for August rainfall iln months with above normal totals: Sikeston, 5.72 inches; Poplar Bluff 6.03; and Caruthersville 5.69 inches. Ranges of rainfall totals for those conditions are: Sikeston, 3.73 to 12.71 inches; Poplar Bluff, 3.67 to 14.58 inches; and Caruthersville, 3.80 to 10.79 inches.

Livestock producers are urged to let pastures rest

With top dressing costs running near $20 an acre, most livestock producers will have to manage their pasture systems better in order to keep production costs in line.

Of course, all pastures need an adequate fertility program, but fertilizer alone is not enough. Rest and reovery periods make grass more productive and it lives a lot longer.

Most pastures get caught in the squeeze when the top is always grazed down and the roots never develop to get the maximum use of the applied topdressing. It takes a big, healthy root system to provide vigorous top growth.

A good pasture takes several separately fenced areas. One with good grass already grown can be grazed while the others rest and recover. When grass in another area has grown up, the livestock are shifted to it to rest the first pasture.

These rest periods allow strong root systems to develop. Strong roots utilize natural and applied nutrients, thus a faster growing, more productive plant.

A poorly managed pasture may be unproductive due to killing out the stand, spot grazing, increased internal parasite infestation and excess trampling. A combination of these conditions leads to water loss and erosion.

Good, well-managed grass reduces water runoff and soil loss to a minimum, while utilizing available nutrients to the maximum.

Planning ahead is essential to get the maximum production from your fertilizer dollar.

USDA adopts policy to retain 'prime' land from non-ag uses

BENTON — The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) today announced a policy to help keep the nation's best farm, range, and forest lands from going into non-agricultural uses.

In announcing the policy, Secretary of Agriculture Earl L. Butz said the loss of "prime" lands well-suited to the production of food, forage and timber is a matter of concern to the nation. Major consideration must be given to longterm needs to retain the productive capability of and environmental values of American agriculture and forestry, he said.

USDA will urge all federal agencies to adopt the policy that federal activities that take prime agricultural land should be carried out only when there are no suitable alternative sites and when the activity meets an overriding public need.

USDA also will work with private organizations and groups to urge the protection of prime lands from premature or unnecessary conversion to nonagricultural land use.

Land use alternatives are generally available that can minimize the impact on prime lands, the secretary said, and such alternatives should be explored carefully, particularly where federal funds are involved and when prime lands will be irrevocably commited to nonagricultural uses.

Other guidelines for protecting prime lands call for (1) environmental impact statements and review procedures, (2) inventories and evaluations of the nation's farms, range and forest lands and (3) cooperative efforts with states, local governments and universities to insure concerns for food, fiber, and wood production are recognized and emphasized in identifying prime agricultural lands.

The prime lands policy also proposes review of all USDA programs to insure that they are consistent with the policy.

Farm loans total $33 billion

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Loans made to farmers and farmer cooperatives totaled $33 billion during the year ending June 30, according to figures released by the Farm Credit Administration.

The $33 billion in loans made represents an 8.6 per cent increase from the $30.4 billion in loans made the previous year. Loans outstanding through the system totaled $34.9 billion June 30, a 16.7 per cent increase from the $29.9 billion of a year earlier.

The lending institutions of the Farm Credit System include the Federal Land Banks, which make long- term loans through local Federal Land Bank Associations; Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, which provide loan funds for local Production Credit Associations, the system's short- and intermediate- term lenders; and the Banks for Cooperatives, which finance farmer cooperatives. The Farm Credit Administration is an independent federal agency which supervises the system.

W. M. Harding, governor of FCA, said the 8.6 per cent increase in loans made represents a return to a more normal lending pattern compared to the early 1970's when yearly loan increases reached as high as 40 per cent. Harding attributed the moderation in loan demand to such factors as a less optimistic attitude among farmers last year toward income levels this year, fewer sales of farms and a greater commitment of funds to agriculture by other lenders.

Harding said the system's lending experience has been that "farmers use credit to a greater extent when they are optimistic over farm income prospects than when they are uncertain over the future. Last year's lending patterns bear this out," he said, "as farmers, expecting lower prices, became less expansion minded."

Production Credit Associations made loans totaling $17.6 billion during the year, up 8 per cent from the $16.3 billionmade during the previous year. The amount of PCA loans outstanding June 30 totaled $12.1 billion, up 12 per cent from the $10.8 billion the previous year. Federal Intermediate Credit Banks made $962 million in loans to financial institutions other than PCAs during the year and had $374 million in loans outstanding June 30 to these institutions. Both loans made and outstanding represented slight increases.

Federal Land Banks made loans totaling $4.5 billion during the year, a 2.2 per cent decline from the $4.6 billion made the year earlier. Loans outstanding at year end stood at $18 billion, an increase of 16.9 per cent from the $15.4 billion a year earlier. There was a slight increase in the number of members having Land Bank loans outstanding to 473,661 on June 30.

The Banks for Cooperatives made loans totaling $9.9 billion during the year, up 15.1 per cen from the $8.6 billion of last year. The amount of lons outstanding June 30 totale $4.4 billion, up 29.4 per cent from the $3.4 billion of a year earlier. The number of farmer cooperatives with loans outstanding at June 30 totaled 3,330, up slightly from a year earlier.

Agriculture director tours SeMo flood area

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri Director of Agriculture James B. Boillot, at the request of Gov. Christopher S. Bond, made a follow-up tour of the Southeast Missouri flooding this week, re-evaluating the problems. Boillot also toured the area last year by air during the height of the floods, but this year's visit was first hand and included tours fo the drainage ditch and levee system in Dunklin and Pemiscot counties.

Boillot was invited to tour the area by the County Courts of both counties.

Southeast Missouri must rely on an extensive system of drainage ditches for rain water run-off. Rainfall amounts this year have been so high at times that the existing ditches cannot assume the burden of all the rainfall. Couple that with the fact that all the ditches merge just south of the Missouri- Arkansas border at Big- Lake National Wildlife efuge, and the water has no place to go.

"In Pemiscot County alone," Boillot explained, "some agriculture experts forecast a 15 per cent crop loss. That converts to about 20,000 acres lost to the flooding."

Boillot continued, "Gov. Bond has asked that the Department of Agriculture studythe situation, and take whatever action is necessary to clear up the problem. We have started that study."

Missouri cultivates new peach

SPRINGFIELD— A new variety of peach, tentatively named Topaz, has been developed at the Missouri Fruit Experiment Station of Southwest Missouri State University, located at Mountain Grove.

The new peach was bred and first cultivated at the State Fruit Experiment Station, and named by Dr. Kenneth Hanson, director of the station. Hanson said the name is subject to the approval of the American Pomological Society nomenclature committee.

The outstanding characteristics of Topaz are its beautiful color and attractive appearance, its very firm flesh and its excellent quality. The peach ripens about July 20 in the Ozarks, approximately 10 days ahead of Loring, a popular peach variety.

"It hangs very well on the trees and colors early," said Hanson. "Most of the fruit should be harvestable in one picking, and it keeps well in storage."

The peach, which is bright red in color, will be on display a tthe station booth at the Ozark Empire Fair, which began Friday and will continue through Aug. 15 in Springfield, and at the State Fair, scheduled Aug. 20-29 in Sedalia.

Size of the peach is large – about two and a half to three and a quarter inches in diameter. Average size is approximately two and three-fourths inches.

Hanson said there are a number of plantings of the tree at the Mountain Grove station, and almost a hundred at Hillcrest Orchards, located near Campbell in the Missouri Bootheel. Hillcrest Orchards is owned and operated by Carlton Stewart, a member of the Fruit Experiment Station board before the station became an affiliate of Southwest Missouri State Univerfsity through state reorganization.

Test trees are also growing at all United States and Canadian experiment statins that work with peaches, and there is a substantial number at Cardinal Farms near Henderson, Ky.

Frank Street, owner of Cardinal farms, terms it "a truly remarkable peach," and feels the industry has "hit something sensational."

He said that "these peaches were picked July 12. Nine days later there was not a single over-ripe peach in the bunch. This is a remarkable trait."

Cardinal Farms has served as an experimental station for 35 years, testing and evaluating new peach varieities. "During all those years I have never seen a peach that would hold its freshness for this long," he said of the new variety.

Hansen believes Topaz is a variety which will give growers an excellent peach to fill the slack season prior to the time the Loring variety ripens.

"The parentage of Topaz is Loring selfed," he said. "Many seedlings resulted from this cross which is characterized by large attractive fruit. However, only one seedling possessed a combination of characteristics to make it outstanding."

This selection was tested as PH-3002, and resulted in the sizeable plantings that have fruited in the Bootheel peach area and in Kentucky.

"On the basis of these resultsd, Topaz is released to all peach growers," he said.

Senators to speak to farmers group

COLUMBIA— Two United States senators, a Republican from Kansas and a Democrat from Missouri, will speak to the annual joint convention of the Midcontinent Farmers and Missouri Farmers Associations.

The one-day session will be held in the Multi-Purpose Complex on the University of Missouri campus.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is on the morning program. He is the ranking Republican on the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and is a former chairman of the Republican National Committee. He was first elected to the Senate in 1968 and was re-elected in 1974.

During World War II he was twice wounded and decorated for heroic achievement. He was instrumental in securing passage of the Rural Telephone Bank Act, the Pesticide Control Act and was an original sponsor of the Rural Development Act.

Sen. Tom Eagleton will speak in the afternoon. The Missouri Democrat was first elected to the Seante in 1968 and as re-elected in 1974.

He possesses honorary degrees from: Suffolk University, Boston, Mass.; Park College, Parkville, Mo.; Rockhurst College, Kansas City; Amherst College, Amherst, Mass.; Culver-Stockton College, Canton, Mo.; St. Louis University; Avila College, Kansas City; BEnedictine College, Atchison, Kan.; and Missouri Valley College, Marshall, Mo.

In the Senate he is a member of Appropriations Committee, Labor and Public Welfare Committee, Special Committee on Aging and District of Columbia Committee.

Fred V. Heinkel, president of the MFA, will make his address to the convention before the noon break. Raymond A. Young, executive vice president of the MFA, will make a business report on the 1976 operations during the morning meeting.

Awards for distinguished service to agriculture, the highest honor bestowed by the 165,000-member organization, will be presented to Harry Chlebowski, president of the St. Louis Bank for Cooperatives; Howard Hayter, manager of the Bolivar MFA Exchange; and to Eagleton. This will be the first time this honor will be conferred upon an exchange manager.

Between 6,000 and 8,000 delegates and guests are expected to attend the convention. A picnic lunch will be served after the morning session and again after the convention is adjourned.

Ten members of the board of directors, a president and vice president will be elected by the convention.

Robert Cross of Stockton is chairman of the resolutions committee. They drafted tentative resolutions at a meeting held on June 25. Local groups have been meeting to study the proposed resolutions and to make changes and recommendations. The entire committee will again meet today to consider any changes suggested by the local meetings.

Among the other members of the resolutions committee are Keith Minton of Dexter, Carl Simpkins of East Prairie and James O. Taylor of Caruthersville.

The Women's Progressive Farmers Association and the Junior Farmers Association, affiliated groups, will also be holding their conventions.

Rural population increasing challenging accommodations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says migration of people from the countryside to cities not only has stopped but that one of the biggest challenges now is to find ways to accommodate those who are returning to rural areas.

Walter A. Guntharp, administrator of the department's Rural Development Service, says "the new trend of rural population and growth" has lessened earlier worries of migration to cities in most areas.

"Instead, rural leaders are asking how they can best develop their communities to accommodate the growing number of young as well as olderpeople who are choosing to remain in rural areas or move to them," he said.

Comments by Guntharp and other USDA officials were included in a report by his agency. Guntharp said there has been a net migration of about 350,000 people a year from urban centers to rural areas — those counties which have no city as large as 50,000 population.

"This is a complete reversal of the urbanward trend of population migration that prevailed from 1940 to the late 1960s," he said.

Calvin Beale, a demographer in USDA's Economics Research Service, said improvedjob opportunities, the growth of trade and services and other economic advantages have helped stem the city-bound tide.

"But changing attitudes about rural life versus big-city life may be equally important in halting the migration, particularly among the young," Beale said. "Their attitudes about what is important to them are changing, and they are increasingly favoring smaller-scale communities as places to live."

Farm loans total $33 billion

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Loans made to farmers and farmer cooperatives totaled $33 billion during the year ending June 30, according to figures released by the Farm Credit Administration.

The $33 billion in loans made represents an 8.6 per cent increase from the $30.4 billion in loans made the previous year. Loans outstanding through the system totaled $34.9 billion June 30, a 16.7 per cent increase from the $29.9 billion of a year earlier.

The lending institutions of the Farm Credit System include the Federal Land Banks, which make long- term loans through local Federal Land Bank Associations; Federal Intermediate Credit Banks, which provide loan funds for local Production Credit Associations, the system's short- and intermediate- term lenders; and the Banks for Cooperatives, which finance farmer cooperatives. The Farm Credit Administration is an independent federal agency which supervises the system.

W. M. Harding, governor of FCA, said the 8.6 per cent increase in loans made represents a return to a more normal lending pattern compared to the early 1970's when yearly loan increases reached as high as 40 per cent. Harding attributed the moderation in loan demand to such factors as a less optimistic attitude among farmers last year toward income levels this year, fewer sales of farms and a greater commitment of funds to agriculture by other lenders.

Harding said the system's lending experience has been that "farmers use credit to a greater extent when they are optimistic over farm income prospects than when they are uncertain over the future. Last year's lending patterns bear this out," he said, "as farmers, expecting lower prices, became less expansion minded."

Production Credit Associations made loans totaling $17.6 billion during the year, up 8 per cent from the $16.3 billionmade during the previous year. The amount of PCA loans outstanding June 30 totaled $12.1 billion, up 12 per cent from the $10.8 billion the previous year. Federal Intermediate Credit Banks made $962 million in loans to financial institutions other than PCAs during the year and had $374 million in loans outstanding June 30 to these institutions. Both loans made and outstanding represented slight increases.

Federal Land Banks made loans totaling $4.5 billion during the year, a 2.2 per cent decline from the $4.6 billion made the year earlier. Loans outstanding at year end stood at $18 billion, an increase of 16.9 per cent from the $15.4 billion a year earlier. There was a slight increase in the number of members having Land Bank loans outstanding to 473,661 on June 30.

The Banks for Cooperatives made loans totaling $9.9 billion during the year, up 15.1 per cen from the $8.6 billion of last year. The amount of lons outstanding June 30 totale $4.4 billion,up 29.4 per cent from the $3.4 billion of a year earlier. The number of farmer cooperatives with loans outstanding at June 30 totaled 3,330, up slightly from a year earlier.

Agriculture director tours SeMo flood area

JEFFERSON CITY — Missouri Director of Agriculture James B. Boillot, at the request of Gov. Christopher S. Bond, made a follow-up tour of the Southeast Missouri flooding this week, re-evaluating the problems. Boillot also toured the area last year by air during the height of the floods, but this year's visit was first hand and included tours fo the drainage ditch and levee system in Dunklin and Pemiscot counties.

Boillot was invited to tour the area by the County Courts of both counties.

Southeast Missouri must rely on an extensive system of drainage ditches for rain water run-off. Rainfall amounts this year have been so high at times that the existing ditches cannot assume the burden of all the rainfall. Couple that with the fact that all the ditches merge just south of the Missouri- Arkansas border at Big- Lake National Wildlife efuge, and the water has no place to go.

"In Pemiscot County alone," Boillot explained, "some agriculture experts forecast a 15 per cent crop loss. That converts to about 20,000 acres lost to the flooding."

Boillot continued, "Gov. Bond has asked that the Department of Agriculture studythe situation, and take whatever action is necessary to clear up the problem. We have started that study."

Missouri cultivates new peach

SPRINGFIELD— A new variety of peach, tentatively named Topaz, has been developed at the Missouri Fruit Experiment Station of Southwest Missouri State University, located at Mountain Grove.

The new peach was bred and first cultivated at the State Fruit Experiment Station, and named by Dr. Kenneth Hanson, director of the station. Hanson said the name is subject to the approval of the American Pomological Society nomenclature committee.

The outstanding characteristics of Topaz are its beautiful color and attractive appearance, its very firm flesh and its excellent quality. The peach ripens about July 20 in the Ozarks, approximately 10 days ahead of Loring, a popular peach variety.

"It hangs very well on the trees and colors early," said Hanson. "Most of the fruit should be harvestable in one picking, and it keeps well in storage."

The peach, which is bright red in color, will be on display a tthe station booth at the Ozark Empire Fair, which began Friday and will continue through Aug. 15 in Springfield, and at the State Fair, scheduled Aug. 20-29 in Sedalia.

Size of the peach is large – about two and a half to three and a quarter inches in diameter. Average size is approximately two and three-fourths inches.

Hanson said there are a number of plantings of the tree at the Mountain Grove station, and almost a hundred at Hillcrest Orchards, located near Campbell in the Missouri Bootheel. Hillcrest Orchards is owned and operated by Carlton Stewart, a member of the Fruit Experiment Station board before the station became an affiliate of Southwest Missouri State Univerfsity through state reorganization.

Test trees are also growing at all United States and Canadian experiment statins that work with peaches, and there is a substantial number at Cardinal Farms near Henderson, Ky.

Frank Street, owner of Cardinal farms, terms it "a truly remarkable peach," and feels the industry has "hit something sensational."

He said that "these peaches were picked July 12. Nine days later there was not a single over-ripe peach in the bunch. This is a remarkable trait."

Cardinal Farms has served as an experimental station for 35 years, testing and evaluating new peach varieities. "During all those years I have never seen a peach that would hold its freshness for this long," he said of the new variety.

Hansen believes Topaz is a variety which will give growers an excellent peach to fill the slack season prior to the time the Loring variety ripens.

"The parentage of Topaz is Loring selfed," he said. "Many seedlings resulted from this cross which is characterized by large attractive fruit. However, only one seedling possessed a combination of characteristics to make it outstanding."

This selection was tested as PH-3002, and resulted in the sizeable plantings that have fruited in the Bootheel peach area and in Kentucky.

"On the basis of these resultsd, Topaz is released to all peach growers," he said.

Senators to speak to farmers group

COLUMBIA— Two United States senators, a Republican from Kansas and a Democrat from Missouri, will speak to the annual joint convention of the Midcontinent Farmers and Missouri Farmers Associations.

The one-day session will be held in the Multi-Purpose Complex on the University of Missouri campus.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., is on the morning program. He is the ranking Republican on the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and is a former chairman of the Republican National Committee. He was first elected to the Senate in 1968 and was re-elected in 1974.

During World War II he was twice wounded and decorated for heroic achievement. He was instrumental in securing passage of the Rural Telephone Bank Act, the Pesticide Control Act and was an original sponsor of the Rural Development Act.

Sen. Tom Eagleton will speak in the afternoon. The Missouri Democrat was first elected to the Seante in 1968 and as re-elected in 1974.

He possesses honorary degrees from: Suffolk University, Boston, Mass.; Park College, Parkville, Mo.; Rockhurst College, Kansas City; Amherst College, Amherst, Mass.; Culver-Stockton College, Canton, Mo.; St. Louis University; Avila College, Kansas City; BEnedictine College, Atchison, Kan.; and Missouri Valley College, Marshall, Mo.

In the Senate he is a member of Appropriations Committee, Labor and Public Welfare Committee, Special Committee on Aging and District of Columbia Committee.

Fred V. Heinkel, president of the MFA, will make his address to the convention before the noon break. Raymond A. Young, executive vice president of the MFA, will make a business report on the 1976 operations during the morning meeting.

Awards for distinguished service to agriculture, the highest honor bestowed by the 165,000-member organization, will be presented to Harry Chlebowski, president of the St. Louis Bank for Cooperatives; Howard Hayter, manager of the Bolivar MFA Exchange; and to Eagleton. This will be the first time this honor will be conferred upon an exchange manager.

Between 6,000 and 8,000 delegates and guests are expected to attend the convention. A picnic lunch will be served after the morning session and again after the convention is adjourned.

Ten members of the board of directors, a president and vice president will be elected by the convention.

Robert Cross of Stockton is chairman of the resolutions committee. They drafted tentative resolutions at a meeting held on June 25. Local groups have been meeting to study the proposed resolutions and to make changes and recommendations. The entire committee will again meet today to consider any changes suggested by the local meetings.

Among the other members of the resolutions committee are Keith Minton of Dexter, Carl Simpkins of East Prairie and James O. Taylor of Caruthersville.

The Women's Progressive Farmers Association and the Junior Farmers Association, affiliated groups, will also be holding their conventions.

Rural population increasing challenging accommodations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says migration of people from the countryside to cities not only has stopped but that one of the biggest challenges now is to find ways to accommodate those who are returning to rural areas.

Walter A. Guntharp, administrator of the department's Rural Development Service, says "the new trend of rural population and growth" has lessened earlier worries of migration to cities in most areas.

"Instead, rural leaders are asking how they can best develop their communities to accommodate the growing number of young as well as olderpeople who are choosing to remain in rural areas or move to them," he said.

Comments by Guntharp and other USDA officials were included in a report by his agency. Guntharp said there has been a net migration of about 350,000 people a year from urban centers to rural areas — those counties which have no city as large as 50,000 population.

"This is a complete reversal of the urbanward trend of population migration that prevailed from 1940 to the late 1960s," he said.

Calvin Beale, a demographer in USDA's Economics Research Service, said improvedjob opportunities, the growth of trade and services and other economic advantages have helped stem the city-bound tide.

"But changing attitudes about rural life versus big-city life may be equally important in halting the migration, particularly among the young," Beale said. "Their attitudes about what is important to them are changing, and they are increasingly favoring smaller-scale communities as places to live."

Alex Rocco and Anne Meara star in "This Better Be It"

Alex Rocco and Anne Meara star as newlyweds for whom marriage is not a new experience and who want to make their second try work, in "This Better Be It," half-hour comedy to be shown on Tuesday, Aug. 10 (8:30-9:00 PM, DST) on the CBS Television Network.

Harry and Annie Bell (Rocco and Miss Meara) have little trouble adjusting to their life together with Harry's pompous young son and Annie's outspoken young daughter. But Annie is trouble by the upcoming marriage of Harry's 20-year- old daughter Diana. Her wedding will be one of the first events together for the whole "new family," and Annie doesn't want to go. She feels her presence will put a strain on everyone, with Harry's ex-wife present. The real family strain, however, is created by Annie's decision not to attend.

Miss Meara, who has been signed for a recurring role in the Network's popular "Rhoda" series, starting this fall, is the distaff member of Stiller and Meara. She and her husband, Jerry Stiller, are noted for their comedy work in clubs and on variety programs.

This past season, Miss Meara starred in the "Kate McShane" series on the Network, her role winning her an Emmy nomination. She has appeared in the feature films "Lovers and Other Strangers" and "The Out of Towners."

Rocco began his career on "Divorce Court." Although he is well remembered for his role in "The Godfather," that of a Las Vegas gambler, he has also played bodyguards in three Al Capone movies, including "The St. Valentine's Day Massacre."

His other film credits include "The Friends of Eddie Coyle," "The Venetian affair" and "Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins." Rocco has made many television guest apperaances and recently starred in the "Three For the Road" series.

"This Better Be It" was directed by Richard Kinon from a script by the creators, Lila Garrett and Lynn Roth, for Chuck Fries Productions, Inc.

Alex Rocco and Anne Meara star in "This Better Be It"

Alex Rocco and Anne Meara star as newlyweds for whom marriage is not a new experience and who want to make their second try work, in "This Better Be It," half-hour comedy to be shown on Tuesday, Aug. 10 (8:30-9:00 PM, DST) on the CBS Television Network.

Harry and Annie Bell (Rocco and Miss Meara) have little trouble adjusting to their life together with Harry's pompous young son and Annie's outspoken young daughter. But Annie is trouble by the upcoming marriage of Harry's 20-year- old daughter Diana. Her wedding will be one of the first events together for the whole "new family," and Annie doesn't want to go. She feels her presence will put a strain on everyone, with Harry's ex-wife present. The real family strain, however, is created by Annie's decision not to attend.

Miss Meara, who has been signed for a recurring role in the Network's popular "Rhoda" series, starting this fall, is the distaff member of Stiller and Meara. She and her husband, Jerry Stiller, are noted for their comedy work in clubs and on variety programs.

This past season, Miss Meara starred in the "Kate McShane" series on the Network, her role winning her an Emmy nomination. She has appeared in the feature films "Lovers and Other Strangers" and "The Out of Towners."

Rocco began his career on "Divorce Court." Although he is well remembered for his role in "The Godfather," that of a Las Vegas gambler, he has also played bodyguards in three Al Capone movies, including "The St. Valentine's Day Massacre."

His other film credits include "The Friends of Eddie Coyle," "The Venetian affair" and "Rafferty and the Gold Dust Twins." Rocco has made many television guest apperaances and recently starred in the "Three For the Road" series.

"This Better Be It" was directed by Richard Kinon from a script by the creators, Lila Garrett and Lynn Roth, for Chuck Fries Productions, Inc.

CBS sports producer Ed Goren wins trips to Mt. Ranier & Everest

Ask Ed Goren of CBS Sports how he got to co-produce the American Bicentennial Everest Expedition for "CBS Sports Spectacular" and he'll rattle off a wild tale of racing Barry Frank, Vice President of CBS Sports, around the Central Park Reservoir in New York City, then making a mad dash by foot, cab and jet to Seattle, Wash., and finally camping out on a Mt. Rainier glacier at 6,3000 feet as a dry run for a climb up Mt. Everest. And it all happened in the course of four hectic days.

Goren first heard of the Everest expedition on June 20. Like this, he recounts: "Barry Frank, Clarence Cross, Director of Sports, and Joan Richman, Executive Producer of 'CBS Sports Spectacular,' asked me about producing three ten- minute segments and an hour- long special based on the climb, which will be broadcast on the CBS Television Network at times and dates to be announced. Then they asked me what kind of shape I was in. I couldn't recall anything I had recently done that was physically strenuous, aside from playing a few rounds of golf."

Frank asked Goren, "How fast do you run the mile?," and volunteered to meet him in Central Park bright and early the next morning for a run around the reservoir. At this point, Goren began to wonder what he was getting himself in to, knowing that Frank makes that run every day. "I fleetingly considered having a friend or two pose as muggers so I wouldn't have to run too far, but finally I decided to let nature take its course."

Acquitting himself nobly on the track, Goren diplomatically let his boss win by 20 lengths. When he came into the office, after the "Great Reservoir Race," Cross was waiting to send him on another endurance run -- cross- country -- to meet mountaineers Phil Trimble, Rick Ridgeway, Dan Emmett, Chris Chandler and Arlene Blum in Seattle. The climbers were to scale Mt. Rainer that weekend and Goren would be accompanying them up the mountain. The next 22 hours were a blur of telephone calls, cabs, jets and shopping sprees in Seattle. "My wife is still in a state of shock," Goren says.

By Sunday afternoon, he and the climbers were dining on dehydrated shrimp creole atop Mt. Rainer's 6,300 - foot Liberty glacier. The 12- mile hike was not as painful as he thought it would be: "I just didn't look up (I didn't want to see how far I had climbed), didn't look back (I didn't want to see how far I still had to go) and just looked at the feet of the person in front of me."

Goren was struck by the solitude on the glacier, and that night he was amazed at the millions of stars visible in the sky. "A New Yorker doesn't even see that many stars in the Hayden Planetarium," he says.

It was an uneventful climb down the mountain, and he later met the rest of the party on the other side of Mt. Rainier after they had reached the summit.

Goren will accompany the American Bicentennial Everest Expedition to the mountain, and will climb some 18,000 feet to the Khumbu Icefall. He'll leave the team there, returning to the United States with the film shot up to that point. As he prepares shooting schedules and irons out production problems for the expedition, Goren foresees one small problem. "Barry wasn't able to tell me how I get back down from the Icefall!"

Goren came to CBS NEWS in December 1969 from WTVJ-TV, the CBS affiliate in Miami, where he was a news reporter and producer. He joined CBS Sports in October 1975, and has produced a number of features for CBS Sports and "CBS Sports Spectacular," including the Ali-Coopman fight, Jack Whitaker's trip to Cuba with the Cuban Pan American Team, Jack Whitaker's report from the Winter Olympics, in Innsbruck, Austria, and several Phyllis George features.

Piccadilly Circus presents the best in British entertainment

"PICCADILLY CIRCUS," a special series presentng the very best of British entertainment from serious drama to comedy shows and documentaries, can be seen at 10 p.m., Wednesdays on KETC-TV, Channel 9

The regular telecast begins with the tragic play, "IT'S A LOVELY DAY TOMORROW." This drama is shaped around actual events which took place in a London subway during World War II, based in part on the memories of some of the survivors. An air raid siren sounded and during the mass rush down to the safety of the subway, someone tripped. As a result, a crowd of people fell and dozens suffocated.

On August 11, "THE GOODIES," Britain's closest rivals to the humor of Monty Python, can be seen relating their own original interpretation of "Jack and the Beanstalk."

On August 18, "PICCADILLY CIRCUS" presents "STOCKER'S COPPER," an award- winning play about a coal mining strike in 1913. Set in the actual location of the strike, the tiny village of St. Austell, Cornwall, the play focuses on one household who closely experience the different sides of the strike issue. A coal miner's wife takes in a boarder, a young Welsh policeman. When strike breaks out at her husband's coal mine, the policeman is sent to check the rioting miners.

On August 25, viewers are given an inside look at the old tradition of the travelling circus. "THE CIRCUS MOVES ON IN CALABRIA" is an intimate glimpse into the tightly-knit society of the performers in the Embellriva Circus. Revealed behind the greasepaint and the glamour is a life of hard work; all the performers are required to erect the big top, drive the trucks and take care of the animals. A BBC crew followed the circus troupe around Italy to film this documentary.

CBS sports producer Ed Goren wins trips to Mt. Ranier & Everest

Ask Ed Goren of CBS Sports how he got to co-produce the American Bicentennial Everest Expedition for "CBS Sports Spectacular" and he'll rattle off a wild tale of racing Barry Frank, Vice President of CBS Sports, around the Central Park Reservoir in New York City, then making a mad dash by foot, cab and jet to Seattle, Wash., and finally camping out on a Mt. Rainier glacier at 6,3000 feet as a dry run for a climb up Mt. Everest. And it all happened in the course of four hectic days.

Goren first heard of the Everest expedition on June 20. Like this, he recounts: "Barry Frank, Clarence Cross, Director of Sports, and Joan Richman, Executive Producer of 'CBS Sports Spectacular,' asked me about producing three ten- minute segments and an hour- long special based on the climb, which will be broadcast on the CBS Television Network at times and dates to be announced. Then they asked me what kind of shape I was in. I couldn't recall anything I had recently done that was physically strenuous, aside from playing a few rounds of golf."

Frank asked Goren, "How fast do you run the mile?," and volunteered to meet him in Central Park bright and early the next morning for a run around the reservoir. At this point, Goren began to wonder what he was getting himself in to, knowing that Frank makes that run every day. "I fleetingly considered having a friend or two pose as muggers so I wouldn't have to run too far, but finally I decided to let nature take its course."

Acquitting himself nobly on the track, Goren diplomatically let his boss win by 20 lengths. When he came into the office, after the "Great Reservoir Race," Cross was waiting to send him on another endurance run -- cross- country -- to meet mountaineers Phil Trimble, Rick Ridgeway, Dan Emmett, Chris Chandler and Arlene Blum in Seattle. The climbers were to scale Mt. Rainer that weekend and Goren would be accompanying them up the mountain. The next 22 hours were a blur of telephone calls, cabs, jets and shopping sprees in Seattle. "My wife is still in a state of shock," Goren says.

By Sunday afternoon, he and the climbers were dining on dehydrated shrimp creole atop Mt. Rainer's 6,300 - foot Liberty glacier. The 12- mile hike was not as painful as he thought it would be: "I just didn't look up (I didn't want to see how far I had climbed), didn't look back (I didn't want to see how far I still had to go) and just looked at the feet of the person in front of me."

Goren was struck by the solitude on the glacier, and that night he was amazed at the millions of stars visible in the sky. "A New Yorker doesn't even see that many stars in the Hayden Planetarium," he says.

It was an uneventful climb down the mountain, and he later met the rest of the party on the other side of Mt. Rainier after they had reached the summit.

Goren will accompany the American Bicentennial Everest Expedition to the mountain, and will climb some 18,000 feet to the Khumbu Icefall. He'll leave the team there, returning to the United States with the film shot up to that point. As he prepares shooting schedules and irons out production problems for the expedition, Goren foresees one small problem. "Barry wasn't able to tell me how I get back down from the Icefall!"

Goren came to CBS NEWS in December 1969 from WTVJ-TV, the CBS affiliate in Miami, where he was a news reporter and producer. He joined CBS Sports in October 1975, and has produced a number of features for CBS Sports and "CBS Sports Spectacular," including the Ali-Coopman fight, Jack Whitaker's trip to Cuba with the Cuban Pan American Team, Jack Whitaker's report from the Winter Olympics, in Innsbruck, Austria, and several Phyllis George features.

Piccadilly Circus presents the best in British entertainment

"PICCADILLY CIRCUS," a special series presentng the very best of British entertainment from serious drama to comedy shows and documentaries, can be seen at 10 p.m., Wednesdays on KETC-TV, Channel 9

The regular telecast begins with the tragic play, "IT'S A LOVELY DAY TOMORROW." This drama is shaped around actual events which took place in a London subway during World War II, based in part on the memories of some of the survivors. An air raid siren sounded and during the mass rush down to the safety of the subway, someone tripped. As a result, a crowd of people fell and dozens suffocated.

On August 11, "THE GOODIES," Britain's closest rivals to the humor of Monty Python, can be seen relating their own original interpretation of "Jack and the Beanstalk."

On August 18, "PICCADILLY CIRCUS" presents "STOCKER'S COPPER," an award- winning play about a coal mining strike in 1913. Set in the actual location of the strike, the tiny village of St. Austell, Cornwall, the play focuses on one household who closely experience the different sides of the strike issue. A coal miner's wife takes in a boarder, a young Welsh policeman. When strike breaks out at her husband's coal mine, the policeman is sent to check the rioting miners.

On August 25, viewers are given an inside look at the old tradition of the travelling circus. "THE CIRCUS MOVES ON IN CALABRIA" is an intimate glimpse into the tightly-knit society of the performers in the Embellriva Circus. Revealed behind the greasepaint and the glamour is a life of hard work; all the performers are required to erect the big top, drive the trucks and take care of the animals. A BBC crew followed the circus troupe around Italy to film this documentary.

Our Story: DAWN, AND STILL THE STORM RAGES. THERE WILL BE NO WAR TODAY FOR FLOOD WATERS FROM THE RIVER COVER THE BATTLEGROUND.

IN THE COUNCIL CHAMBER, PRINCE VALIANT MAKES AN ANNOUNCEMENT: "MY LORDS, DO HOMAGE TO TELEMON, YOUR REAL KING! AND THERE SITS HAJAS, HIS UNCLE, WHO STOLE THE THRONE FROM TELEMON WHEN HE WAS BUT A CHILD. GUARDS! TAKE HIM TO HIS ROOMS."

AJAXOS SPRINGS TO HIS FEET, BLACK WITH RAGE. BUT HAJAS WAVES HIM DOWN: "FOR TWENTY YEARS I HAVE LIVED IN FEAR OF THIS DAY. I AM TIRED OF DECEIT AND TREACHERY.... YES, TELEMON IS INDEED THE KING."

HAJAS SHUFFLES FROM THE HALL ASSISTED BY HIS ATTENDANTS, AND AS HE DEPARTS SO DOES THE INFLUENCE OF HIS CHIEF ADVISOR, AJAXOS.

"STAND BACK, TELEMON, THIS IS MY QUEST. I SEEK TO RESTORE THE PRINCESS HELENE TO HER SISTER, ALETA, QUEEN OF THE MISTY ISLES!"

"WHAT A CHEAP LITTLE MAN YOU ARE. YOU COULD HAVE HAD HER FOR A PRICE," SNEERS AJAXOS. VAL MAKES NO REPLY. HE IS STUDYING HIS HUGE OPPONENT, TRYING TO FIND A WEAK SPOT IN HIS ARMOR. ONLY THEN DOES THE BRIGHT BLADE OF 'THE SINGING SWORD' COME WHISPERING FROM ITS SCABBARD.

PONYTAIL ◇◇ BY LEE HOLLEY

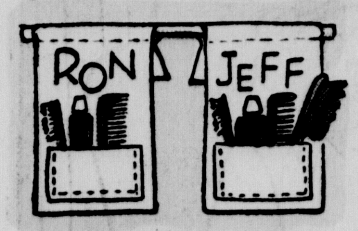

DEAR HELOISE:
Having suddenly become the mother of four school-aged children, I've had to develop some practical methods of organization around our house. Thought you might like to share one of our hints with your readers.

Each youngster has a hand-towel with his or her name on it and a washcloth pocket sewn on.

In the pocket goes their own personal toilet articles which have their names marked on with a felt marker.

The top edge is folded over and sewn down forming a hem, and then is hung on a rod fastened to the wall so the towel can come down easily for washing.

Now when the bathroom is left cluttered, I know exactly who the guilty party is, but the children are so proud of their towels that the bathroom stays remarkably neat!

Kris Bastlett

Great! Everything is right at the child's fingertips and the towels can be laundered quickly with no ironing.

Might even be a good idea for Mom and Dad, with larger pockets, of course, to hold Mom's make-up and Dad's shaving items.

Heloise

BLUE JEAN TIP

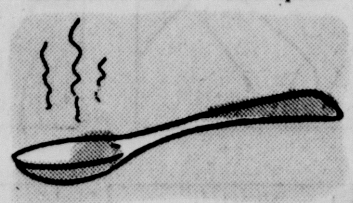

DEAR HELOISE:
Turn heavy pants and blue jeans wrong side out before drying them in the dryer.

The pockets and inside seams dry a lot faster.

Mrs. Debbi Skeels

SHORT 'N' SWEET

DEAR HELOISE:
While baking today, I discovered that a warm spoon will make the job of creaming sugar and shortening go as fast as a "Texas jackrabbit."

Arlyce Manney

DINNER'S READY!

DEAR HELOISE:
For mothers with small children:

To save a mess on the floor with children who can't keep food on flat dishes, use a TV dinner tray.

They are easy to clean, can be reused, and no more picking food off the floor.

Mrs. S. Kimble

TURN THE TABLES!

DEAR HELOISE:
This is a hint for gals who do ceramics. Use a small turntable to set your piece while you work on it.

This way, it's easy to turn, and there's less chance of the greenware crumbling in your hands while cleaning or painting.

A.C.

CLOTHESPIN PIN-UP

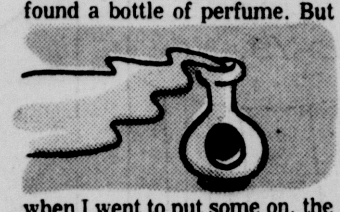

DEAR HELOISE:
I got very tired of cloth clothespin bags wearing out so quickly. I took a bleach jug, cut it open at the front from the neck down about halfway to the bottom.

With my ice pick I punched holes in the bottom because, although I "never" leave my bag out, it always seems to be on the line when it rains. I finished by twisting a coat hanger through the handle and making a deep hook to hang it by. Cost, zero dollars and about four minutes time.

Lau Ross

JUST A DROP!

DEAR HELOISE:
I was looking in the medicine chest in our bathroom and found a bottle of perfume. But when I went to put some on, the bottle was empty.

I filled the bottle about half full of water, put the cap on and shook it a few times.

When I opened the bottle, I was surprised to find it smelled just like cologne!

I LOVE BROWNIES

DEAR HELOISE:
Today I was making fudge brownies for my hard-working husband. I wanted to use chopped nuts but hated the thought of cutting them.

While searching for something to make the job easier, I came across my onion dicer.

It did such a beautiful job I just had to pass on my discovery.

Mrs. Deb Klim

8-8

HE'S SEVEN POUNDS!

DEAR HELOISE:
When our two children were born I made inexpensive and original birth announcements and thank-you notes. At a stationery store, I bought a box of 100 informal notes with envelopes for about $2, a package of baby-gift wrapping paper and some glue. I cut a figure from the gift wrapping paper, glued it on the front of the note and wrote the information needed inside.

These cost me about 3 or 4 cents apiece, compared to 15 cents for the commercial ones. Really a saving. Everyone liked them, some people didn't even know they were homemade. I have used the same idea for dinner and party invitations. You can really come up with some original ideas this way.

Nola Weber

WHO'S A PILL?

DEAR HELOISE:
To remove "pills" from sweaters, use a two-inch spring clip and a medium-fine sandpaper.

Cut the sandpaper one inch wide and the length of the clip.

Fold strip in half, insert into clip. Gently sand the pills from the sweater.

Emma Burke

BEAR WITH ME!

DEAR HELOISE:
I have an old stuffed teddy bear that sits on my bed. One day I noticed that he was getting dirty. As he was not washable, my mom suggested a great idea: I sprayed on some foamy rug cleaner, sponged it in, and let him dry. I then brushed him out and he was all clean again. I could probably have vacuumed him, too, when he was thoroughly dry.

Jolene
Age 14

Jolene, you and your mom are "honey" bears to have thought of this.

However, Mothers, I would suggest you not try this on an infant's stuffed animal. The cleaner might be toxic. Instead, try rubbing dry cornstarch (just as it comes from the package) into the toy. Let it stand two or three hours, then brush the toy well with a stiff brush.

  Possibilities: 1. Tampa. 2. Omaha. 3. Topeka.

TRICK: A magician holds up a coin for his audience to see. He then drops it into a mysterious box. When he shakes the box, the coin rattles inside. When the box is peered into, however, the coin is gone.

Secret: The inside of the box is covered with black paper or cloth. Similarly, both sides of a coin are covered.

When the magician holds up a coin, he has the camouflaged second coin behind it. He palms the first and drops the second. In subdued light, the box appears to be empty.

With a little practice, this trick should look almost professional.
